BU expedition to Mexico

Participants in the recent adventure to Mexico start the long climb to Los Cruces camp on the way to Popocatepetl, a 17,860-foot volcano about 40 miles east of Mexico City. At this point they are leaving the last of the pine forest which surrounds the mountain and are moving into the dry alpine region. (Story on pages 20-21)

Promoting cultural diversity important goal

By HARRY AUSPRICH, Ph.D.
President of the University

The higher education community is currently struggling with a surge of racial tensions. Incidents of harassment and violence are reported with increasing regularity in The Chronicle of Higher Education. The entire community — faculty, students, and staff — are grappling with the issues of pluralism and cultural diversity, and a broad range of viewpoints are being aired. One view was expressed in an essay published in Time, February 5, 1990:

"The battle cry is 'inclusion' in the teaching curriculum for every politically situated minority. . . . Last year Stanford University changed its course on Western civilization into a curriculum of inclusion by imposing a kind of ethnic and gender quota system for Great Books. Stanford can afford such educational indulgences. Its graduates will get jobs even if their education is mildly distorted by this inclusionary passion."

On this point, I must disagree with the essayist. Recognition of the contributions of minorities is an affirmation that many persons have contributed to our world culture — some of whom have done so against overwhelming prejudice of race or gender. To fail to recognize and celebrate those contributions is to give creddence to their oppressors and those who have failed to include them in the past.

To enhance the universalization of our human spirit, Bloomsburg University faculty, staff, and students regularly organize activities and events aimed at increasing an awareness of and appreciation for cultural diversity. Several events were scheduled to take place during February and March, the national celebration of Black History Month and Women's History Month. These events, along with other initiatives that reflect an appreciation of cultural diversity such as the Provost Lecture Series and Celebrity Artist Series, are symbolic of our desire to live in a community where the contributions of every individual are fully respected and valued.

As a university we affirm that ignorance and arrogance ends where education begins. The curriculum, co-curricular activities, and other opportunities Bloomsburg University provides must help foster a greater familiarity with and appreciation for the contributions of all human knowledge while promoting the acceptance of racial and cultural differences. Promoting and encouraging this initiative will be a continual goal for our university.

Alumni contacts key to success

By ANTHONY IANIERO
Assistant Vice President for Development

"Not Another Phone Call from Bloomsburg University!"

For many alumni this year has resulted in overwhelming contact with Bloomsburg University. Not only have we been asking for the normal gift to the Annual Fund, we've also begun requesting gifts for The Trust for Generations campaign, as well as verifying the addresses and phone numbers of over 30,000 alumni. If you are one of the "lucky" alumni, you may have been contacted three times between the fall of 1989 and the spring of 1990. If you are the parent of a current student, you may have received an additional call. "Holy Hannah? What is going on?"

Let me clarify!

Keeping in contact with our alumni has always been a priority of the Alumni Office and the University. This year, more than ever, we found that more alumni were "lost" than in previous years. This happens because our alumni forget to let us know that they have moved. In some cases we are still sending mail to the parents of our alumni. This is fine as long as the alumnus is living there, but many parents continue accepting mail for their children long after the kids are gone. This results in announcements of Homecoming, Alumni Day, chapter meetings, travel trips, etc., being received by the alumni on an untimely basis. This results in alumni missing out on opportunities that would allow them to congregate with old friends. This results in alumni feeling isolated from what is going on at the University.

To address this problem, three things have been done.

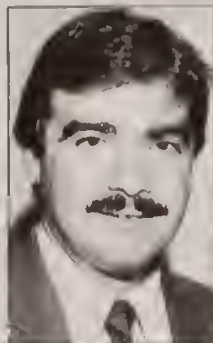

1) A fax machine has been put in at the Alumni House so that alumni can remain in better touch, updating us with career information, family updates, address changes, etc. The fax number is 717-389-4060.

2) An 800 line has been put in at the Alumni House for the same reasons as listed above. Now you can call the Alumni Office toll free at 1-800-526-0254.

3) This fall and spring alumni were contacted on a personal basis to verify that the information we have on file is correct. Of the 30,000 alumni on file, over 9,000 changes were made. From the numbers alone, you can see the importance of doing this type of service on a regular basis.

That's the reason for one call. The second call should come as no surprise to the majority of alumni. Each year for the past five years, the Bloomsburg University Foundation has been conducting a phonathon for gifts to the Annual Fund. Those alumni who send in an early gift do not get called, but that leaves approximately 25,000 alumni who are contacted each spring. Gifts to the Annual Fund support the operating budget of the university, enabling us to support existing student scholarships, alumni programming, facilities, etc. This year's phonathon began at the end of February and continues through April.

Call number three is a special call. As you are aware, the university is in the middle of a $3.5 million campaign called The

IANIERO

Trust for Generations. This is the largest private financial initiative ever undertaken by the university. Its purpose is to help perpetuate a strong academic program for future students. In the past year and a half, more than $2.3 million has been pledged or donated toward the $3.5 million goal. Alumni in classes ending in '4 & '9, alumni in classes between 1900 and 1929, and alumni who have never made a gift to the university were contacted this fall to ask for their support of this campaign. To date, over $237,000 has been pledged or received from our alumni. With 15,000 alumni to contact this fall, we are $263,000 short of our alumni goal of $500,000. So if you did not receive the third phone call this year, you will receive it within the next. Detailed information about this campaign will be provided to you prior to the call.

That's it in a nutshell. Please know that 1989, 1990, and 1991 are special years for Bloomsburg University. While we are asking our alumni to be generous for the duration of this campaign, it will be over shortly and things will return to normal. Please be supportive when you receive your call. Our undergraduate students and alumni callers are eager to answer your questions and pass along messages.

I hope this has answered some of the questions you may have had. We welcome your comments and your questions, both in the Alumni Office and the Foundation Office. Feel free to contact either Doug Hippenstiel, director of alumni affairs, or myself, if we can be of service to you.

Final thoughts

By MARY ANNE KLEMKOSKY '59
President, Alumni Association

My term of office on the board of directors comes to an end at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association on Alumni Week end, and it has been my pleasure to represent and serve our organization. During the past six years of service, I have had the opportunity to associate with many dedicated individuals. Bloomsburg University alumni are fortunate to have the leadership of Doug Hippenstiel, director of alumni affairs, and his staff. Many of us are unfamiliar with the mammoth scope of duties to serve over 31,000 alumni and are sometimes unaware of the activities necessary to have a successful association. Doug, Linda Long, and Jackie Winters do an excellent job at providing quality service, and my appreciation goes to the entire staff for their untiring effort.

I have been fortunate to have the experience of sharing a close relationship with many members of the University during my term of office by participation in on- and off-campus activities. As a microcosm of the University, it has made me prouder than ever to be an alumnus of Bloomsburg University. Your alma mater is a leader in many educational fronts across the curriculum and is second to none in the State System of Higher Education.

Why not make it a point to attend Alumni Weekend activities on April 27, 28, and 29, 1990. From the Husky Club Auction & Dinner-Dance featuring vacation condos, get-away weekends, and much more items, to a tour of the newly renovated "Old" Science Hall (a challenge to past memories), to the Awards Dinner where we recognize Distinguished Service, Young Alumni of the Year, and Honorary Alumni, your weekend will be filled with enjoyment and camaraderie.

Join us for an enjoyable campus visit! Make your reservations for Alumni Weekend today using the form in the Quarterly! Visit the Fenstermaker Alumni House to meet the staff that serves you well!

Educational tool intrigues Russia

(Editor's Note: The following article by Jim Sachettl '73, editor of the Press-Enterprise, Bloomsburg, appeared in the February 17 edition of that publication.)

The way Hank Bailey figures it, there are probably more personal computers in the room just outside his Bloomsburg University office than there are in the whole of the Soviet Union.

So he may have to tote his own when he boards a plane for Moscow this spring to show Soviet scientists and students a new educational tool that could revolutionize the way people learn in school and at home.

It's called interactive video (IAV), an exciting marriage of computer and television over which Bailey has presided.

His five-year-old institute for Interactive Technologies in BU's McCormick Center is the only one of its kind in the country, training graduate students from all over the world in the use of video cameras, computer programs and laser disc technology to create learning programs that may one day be as commonplace as books.

It took only a one-hour visit to the Institute last summer to convince a Soviet physicist that his colleagues back home would have to see Bailey's work to believe it.

So one day in December, Bailey got the Christmas surprise of his career: a phone call inviting him to demonstrate IAV at Moscow State University and the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

"When the call came he said 'Felix Rizvanov' and I had to think about who it was," Bailey recalls. "When he was here last summer he said he would get back to me, but a lot of people say that. Never did I expect someone from the Soviet Union to get back to me."

Bailey, 49, has the thoughtful, straightforward manner you'd expect of a professor who has taught math and computing for more than 20 years. When he confides that the phone call sent him "running around" with the good news, you know just how excited he was.

"I was kind of high," he admits, "I consider it a great honor."

For the university, it's also an opportunity to establish a relationship with a major Soviet university that could lead to collaborative research as well as student and cultural exchanges. That's why BU President Harry Ausprich and Dean of Student Development Jack Mulka have also been invited.

"Hank's work is very, very well regarded," says Ausprich, who adds that their host Rizvanov, is said to be high up in Soviet scientific circles.

"Hank has a national reputation and now he'll have an international one," adds Mulka.

Bailey says it's just "potluck" that he got a chance to show the Soviets his stuff. He remembers showing them a poison prevention program that had been put together for small children using characters like Peter Rabbit and Mr. Yuk.

"They kind of got a kick out of that," he says. "They had never seen anything like it before."

"Now, the Soviets are interested in how to use that technology, particularly laser disc technology, to assist them with educational training in environmental issues," Bailey explains. "I think we just happen to have something that they don't have."

The same could be said of most universities in the United States. IAV has been around for only about a decade, and only a handful of schools teach it.

Bailey's program is the only one that awards a graduate degree to students who learn to write programs like the one three young women are using to learn sign language in the Institute's main office. The women, who are studying to become teachers of the hearing impaired, point to a word on the computer screen to instantly access a video clip of a BU professor demonstrating the sign. More than 650 words are stored on the LP-size laser disc, which enables the computer and the television to interact.

"Our students do everything," Bailey says proudly. "We design it, we go out and research the topics, we write the scripts, we shoot the video, we do the programming, we do the graphics. And it's all original work from beginning to end."

In its first five years, the Institute has taught some 60 graduates the basics of video production, computer programming and communication.

"It's a very rigorous program," Bailey says. "A lot of these people are probably working 60 to 80 hours a week. They do it for a year and then there's a pot o' gold at the end. Basically all of our graduates are employed."

IAV training programs produced at BU are being marketed across the country, earning prestige for the university and income for its foundation to reinvest on campus.

For Bailey, who had not even heard of IAV five years ago, when he was asked to produce his first one, the Institute has brought professional satisfaction as well as prestige.

"I love it," he says. "It's a fascinating job. Every day is a new experience. The students are refreshing."

Bailey was a math professor with a doctorate in curriculum and instruction when he began trying out computer-assisted instruction, "just dabbling in it and having fun."

So when a doctor at Geisinger Medical Center asked the university in 1985 to help produce an IAV program to train nurses, Bailey's name came up.

"I don't know whether to admit this or not," Bailey says, smiling. "I didn't know what IAV was. But I said 'sure.' I went off, took a quick short course down at the University of Georgia and two months later was teaching a course."

With crucial help from the Ben Franklin Partnership, a state program designed to harness the creative energies of industry and education, the Institute was founded. Master's degree candidates were soon arriving from all over the country and the world.

"We've had students from China, Taiwan, the Philippines, New Guinea, Argentina, Mongolia, Nigeria," Bailey says.

"It's great having these different cultures in here because they add something just to the human experience that one gets."

The program requires students to master skills as technically rigorous as computer programming and as open-ended as communication.

"It's very eclectic," Bailey says. "I need somebody who's open-minded and can adjust. A philosopher can learn this just as well as a computer science major. Often a computer science major is so rigid in their thinking that our challenge is to get them out of their focus and get them to open up a little more. Whereas you get somebody from music or art, these people are as open as you can find, so our job there is to get them focused and get them to use technology to control some of their thinking."

In addition to managing the Institute and keeping up with the hyper-changing technology, Bailey resists the temptation to give up what he calls his "first love": teaching. "I probably really shouldn't do it with everything else, but it's my only contact with students and I don't just want to be some aloof administrator who is pumping out students and has no idea who they are," he says.

Bailey has been invited to demonstrate IAV so many times that he now says confidently, "I could do it in my sleep." He has traveled all over the United States, most recently to Anaheim, Calif., and once abroad, to Heidelberg, West Germany.

And now, to the Soviet Union. "I can't say Russia is a place that I ever had a great desire to visit," he says, musing that it was probably because a trip behind the Iron Curtain was so hard to imagine. Now he says he can't wait to go.

"Never in my wildest imagination" is how Dean Mulka describes his reaction to the invitation as he talks about the improbable circumstances that brought Rizvanov to Bloomsburg last summer.

The physicist, who is also a leading Soviet environmentalist, had come to the United States as one of two advisers accompanying 14 high-school-age students to a youth leadership conference at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

But only seven Soviet students had been expected, so Rizvanov and half the group were taken to Philadelphia while conference officials cast about for a "suitable alternate activity," Mulka said.

Someone in Harrisburg mentioned that high school students from all over the state were attending the Governor's School for the Arts at BU, so the wandering visitors were soon Bloomsburg bound.

Bailey's Interactive Institute, with its rows of computer and television monitors, was only a small part of the Soviets' 10-day visit, but it was the part Rizvanov didn't forget.

"Seeing what we were doing here just rang a bell with him," Bailey says. "To the best of my knowledge they don't have anything like this over there. They don't have IBM computers. There may be a Macintosh or two floating around the country."

"I think he went back to the Soviet Union and said, 'I've got

Many changes in College of Business

By CAROL MATTESON
Dean, College of Business

I am pleased to have this opportunity to share with you recent happenings within the College of Business. I arrived on campus in August, 1989, from the University of Maine System. Your alma mater has many fine qualities and I am very pleased to be here. In particular, I have found the College of Business faculty and students to be bright, friendly and very committed to what they are doing.

With the completion of Sutliff Hall renovations two years ago, the College of Business has concentrated on the integration of information technology into the business curriculum. Each faculty member has his or her own computer linked together in a Local Area Network (LAN). We have been chosen to take the leadership role, and our LAN will be the prototype in pilot testing connectivity of networks to the mainframe. Our students will be the first to experiment and help "de-bug" a computerized course request and scheduling system before it goes campus wide. There are two computer labs in Sutliff containing 48 PCs for student and instructional use. By the end of this summer we will have a seminar room for use by upper division classes and graduate courses. Also, each classroom is now equipped with a computer and projection screen which allows the instructor to utilize software directly as part of the teaching process. One would be hard pressed to find a typewriter in Sutliff!

MATTESON

The College of Business has moved rapidly into the development of international opportunities for faculty and student exchanges, faculty research opportunities, and student international internships. Two years ago, Professors Rahul Amin and Charles Chipman founded the Institute for Comparative International Management Studies (ICIMS). We currently have a joint-venture MBA program with Chinese Culture University in Taipei, Taiwan, and are in the development process of providing the Bloomsburg University MBA to executives in South Asia. Bernie Dill has taught in France; Francis Gallagher has been in Europe and is in the process of finalizing exchanges with the Sheffield Institute of Technology in England. We plan to have six business students studying in England next fall; Charles Chapman has been to China as well as Taiwan, and we are in the process of finalizing arrangements for student and faculty exchanges with Shenyang College of Finance and Economics in China. We are also working with European University, the University of Nancy in France, and several other European universities to develop similar opportunities for our students. It is very important that business students today understand how business operates in a global economy.

Two College of Business students' research projects were selected for presentation at the State System of Higher Education Conference. Jeanie Yap presented a research paper on the Five Year Accounting Degree Program, and Melody Bowersox presented a research paper on Telecomputing. Internship activities are important for students who desire a real world business experience. We have a growing number of requests from students for internships. As alumni you may be able to help us if you know of companies that would be interested in providing an internship opportunity or if in your current organization would be willing to take a Bloomsburg University intern. Please contact my office if you have such opportunities available or are interested in talking further about such opportunities.

As we move into a new era in business education, it is important that we provide our students with the necessary library materials and access to information data bases that will allow them the educational experience necessary to be able to compete. We're very thankful for an anonymous $50,000 gift recently received from an alumnus of the College of Business of Bloomsburg University for library enhancement. If you as an alum are thinking of ways in which you might help the College of Business, gifts that could be used for library enhancement or technology improvements would be very much appreciated. We are also very grateful for gifts from corporate donors which supported development of one of the computer labs in Sutliff.

There have been many changes in the College of Business over the years, and we invite each of you to come back and visit us. Thank you for your continued support of the College of Business and the University.

Tragic deaths shock BU

Memorial services were held in Bloomsburg on March 25 for Dr. Ellen B. Barker, assistant professor of psychology since 1980, who died Monday, March 19, in Morehead, Ky. Police reported she was killed by her husband, Dr. Larry W. Jones, who then took his own life. Jones served Bloomsburg University from 1981 to 1985 as provost and later as interim president.

Dr. Barker was on sabbatical leave at the time of her death.

"Ellen was a caring, dedicated faculty member who took pride in her teaching," said President Harry Ausprich. "She was an active member of the Bloomsburg community — in a professional capacity, in her church, and as a concerned citizen with a wide range of interests."

Referring to Jones, Ausprich said, "We remember him as an effective manager and administrator who was committed to the academic advancement of the institution.

"Their contributions to the life of the university, its faculty, staff and students were significant, and we share in the grief of their family and friends."

A native of Minneapolis, Dr. Barker earned her bachelor's degree at Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn., and her doctorate from the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis. She had previously taught at Allegheny College in Meadville, Pa., and at the University of Wisconsin in Eau Claire.

Report on winter athletic programs

By MARY GARDNER
Athletic Director

Business as usual is very hectic in the athletic department, so I'll do the best I can to bring you up to date on the activity in and around the Nelson Fieldhouse. I'm sure a lot of you have read about the success our teams have enjoyed throughout the winter months as we continued to strive for excellence in the Pennsylvania Conference (PC) as well as nationally.

If you didn't get the opportunity to see our teams in action or read about their accomplishments, I'll pass along some of the highlights from the winter.

The men's basketball team battled some key injuries throughout the season but built an impressive 19-8 record. The final record marked the 24th consecutive season that the team has posted a winning season, including the last 19 years under current coach Charlie Chronister. Seniors Dave Carpenter and Dallas Wilson and sophomore Rob Gluck all earned all-conference recognition.

Since coach Joe Bressi's arrival on campus four seasons ago, our women's basketball program has also become one of the top clubs in the conference and Eastern Region, and this year's 22-7 record was no exception. The team won its fifth-straight PC Eastern Division title and played in the national tournament for the second year in a row. Junior Barb Hall and sophomore Michelle Simons were named to the all-conference team.

GARDNER

The men's swimming and diving team was extremely young with just one senior on the team but showed some promise as the winter progressed and will be fun to watch grow over the next few seasons.

Coach Dave Rider deserves to be commended for doing an outstanding job with our women's swimming and diving squad this season. His team had a winning dual record for the 14th-straight year but, more importantly, qualified 11 performers, nine of whom earned All-American honors, helped the Huskies to finish in 11th place in the team race. Less noticeably, the team also had nine PC champions and a 10th-straight runner-up finish in the conference.

One of the highlights of the winter season came in early March when we served as host to the national-qualifying Eastern Wrestling League (EWL) Championships. Recognized as one of the top Division I wrestling leagues in the nation, the EWL provided a lot of outstanding competition and served as a stepping stone for 44 athletes, including six of our own, to get a shot at winning a national title.

The wrestling team established a new school record by winning 17 dual matches (17-7) and won its second-consecutive PC championship. Dave Kennedy tied a school record for wins (35), won titles in the PC and EWL championships and became the fifth wrestler in school history to pass the 100-victory mark in his career.

Kennedy and fellow senior Tony Reed were ranked among the top wrestlers in their weight classes throughout the season. Reed also passed the 100-victory total as he and Kennedy as well as Jon Kinchen, Tom Kuntzman, Tom Socker and Scott Brown all represented Bloomsburg at the national tournament.

Now that I've told you about our teams who have recently finished their seasons, I want to remind you to try and take the opportunity this spring to see one of the active teams in action.

Several of the squads are off to fine starts already, and the softball and men's tennis teams are ranked among the top five teams in the country!

You may notice some new names and faces since your last contact with the athletic department. Joe Hazzard has joined the training staff, replacing Art Hopkins who moved into a business in Little Rock, Arkansas. Also, with women's soccer added to our varsity program Chuck Lauderemilch has been added to our staff. Chuck has served on the university faculty for several years but will join the athletic department in the fall for the first. While some new people have come, others are going. Along with Art, John Babb announced his resignation as head baseball coach effective at the end of the season.

Some changes in our buildings are noticeable or will be in the very near future. A complete repainting of the main arena and many of the adjoining areas has really added to the interior appearance of the fieldhouse. We have upgraded the pressbox in the arena and added many new banners in the rafters and on the walls to properly honor the accomplishments of all our championship teams. We upgraded athletic training equipment and expanded the training room and lockerrooms, which should make the building even more useful, if that is possible for a place that never seems to be empty!

Finally, in closing, I want to mention two things that will keep us very busy over the next few months. Our annual "Day of Champions" banquet will be held in May honoring many of our athletes for their contributions to Bloomsburg over the past few seasons. Summer camps are beginning to fill up, making it look like it could be one of the busiest summers ever at Bloomsburg.

Suggestions and comments are always accepted, and I hope you get the chance to see and support one of our teams during a visit to campus or near you on one of their many road trips.

Former student gives BU $100,000

Kenneth Gross, who attended BU as a student from 1970 to 1973, has donated a gift of $100,000 to the BU Foundation to support the school's scholarship program.

Gross' contribution will be recognized as part of the second phase — The Scholarship Fund — of the university's five-year Trust for Generations fundraising campaign.

"Bloomsburg University is deeply grateful to Kenneth Gross for his generous contribution to our scholarship program," said Anthony Ianiero, assistant vice president for development. "At his request, the foundation will develop a perpetual scholarship which will be used to assist non-traditional students and others who attend BU."

Gross, 37, is the former owner and president of Tri-State Securities Systems — a security alarm system business he and his brother started in their hometown of Philadelphia in 1977. He gained sole possession of Tri-States from his brother four years ago, but sold the business last September to a company known as Security Link.

From 1977 to 1989, Gross and his brother had opened additional Tri-State operations throughout Florida, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania; and in the metropolitan areas of Atlanta, Baltimore, Memphis, and Washington, D.C.

Gross will continue, however, to serve as a consultant to his former business.

TREE FOR BERWICK — An ornamental crabapple was planted on the lawn of City Hall in Berwick, donated by David L. Force '66, Alfred Melito '69, Joseph Casarella '64, Richard Walton '72, Andrew Soback '50, Sallie Edwards '44 and Frank Bullono. Shown at the tree planting are (from left) Louis Biacchi, mayor; Kirk Bower, councilman, Walton; Soback, councilman; Melito, Ronald Garrison and Frank Bullono, councilman.

ILLINOIS — A honey locust tree was planted on the campus of Illinois State University in Normal by Thomas S. Fowles '67, who lives in Normal.

Trees donated

Additional trees have been planted by Bloomsburg University alumni and friends in commemoration of the university's Sesquicentennial celebration.

First, however, we would like to correct some omissions from the list in the last issue of The Alumni Quarterly. Four trees were donated by Robert H. Parker '39 and his wife, Helen C. Parker. Mr. Parker's class year was omitted.

Two trees were donated by the Class of 1982. Doug Taylor is president of the class.

A tree was planted at the Goddard Memorial State Park in Warwick, R.I., by John J. Waples '67 and Mary Jo Steinhart Waples in honor of Mrs. Harold G. (Hannah S.) Steinhart, Class of 1935.

A tree was planted on campus by Jeffrey R. and Sharon L. Jenkins '82, as a tribute to the Class of 1982.

The Gabora Family (Harry '50, Connie '52, Kim '83, Ed '88 and Bill Bont '83) and the Stanko Family (Donald '63) — Memorial to George Gorko '60, educator and beloved cousin.

The Class of 1983. Tribute to Bloomsburg University — the faculty, students and alumni. Kim Gabora Bont is president of the class.

Anne M. O'Brien '90 and Peter J. O'Brien — Memorial to their father, Bernard E. O'Brien '58 (two trees).

NEW MEXICO — A tree was planted at the new Loving High School in Loving, N.M., by Suzanne Dennis '77 (right), who is holding her daughter, Meredith. The tree was planted in honor of Meredith and in memory of Mary Elizabeth Lohman Netts. Also shown are George Fredenck, head teacher, and David Chavez, superintendent.

Popocatepetl: The Smoking Giant

By ROY SMITH
QUEST Director

It was the eagle hovering over a cactus plant clutching a snake in its talons — the long awaited sign — that inspired the Aztecs to settle on the edge of the great lake Texcoco and subsequently conquer the city of Tenochtitlan which we now know as Mexico City.

It was a miserably cold morning with a threat of snow in the air as we left the QUEST office at 3:30 a.m. on a late December morning and scurried south along a snow blown highway for the Philadelphia airport. Ten hours later we disembarked from Mexicana's 737 jet, into the balmy 60s of a Mexico City winter. The air is bad here. At a mile and half above sea level automobiles spew out almost double the pollution as at sea level and contributes to the appalling pall of smog which hangs over the city. Built on a lake bed and surrounded by a ring of volcanic mountains the air becomes trapped over the city creating one of the world's smoggiest landscapes.

Three days in Mexico City at 7,300 feet was part of our acclimatization program prior to attempting to climb the volcano, Popocatepetl, 17,780 feet or more than three miles above sea level.

MEXICO CITY, the home of more than three distinct civilizations over a period of 2500 years, finally succumbed to the Spanish conquistador, Fernandez Cortez in 1521. Plunder and the salvation of pagan souls drove Cortez's army to extremes. In the spirit of the inquisition — then enjoying considerable popularity in Spain — those failing to submit to the authority of the church were roasted alive or branded as slaves and then worked to death in the silver mines. It has been estimated that by 1540 the Indian population of Mexico had been reduced by half.

The Presidential Palace, the meeting place and offices of the Mexican Government, and the National Cathedral, both dating back to the mid-16th century, now stand on the foundations of the Aztec Emperor's palace and principal religious centers. Only the great Plaza remains. Trod formerly by the bustling theocrats of Montezuma's Empires, today it is thronged by all. As in former times, great events of state continue to be inaugurated here with the blessing of the church which lies on the north side of the plaza, and the office of the president whose office lies to the east. Today there are new lords and new Indians. Little perhaps has changed!

The sector of the city surrounding the national cathedral and presidential palace is almost entirely Spanish Colonial architecture, much of the building stone derived from the temples and pyramids of the Aztecs. The cobbled streets exude character. I know of few cities in our own country with a comparable grandeur of architecture, none with its meticulously cobbled streets and quiet, flower lined alleys and malls. Public buildings are architectural works of art that embellish virtually every street. The city appears to have been built with the aesthetic, cultural and spiritual needs of the people in mind. Mexicans from the outlying provinces visiting the city stand in awe at the splendor of its architecture, just as they might have done five hundred years ago in the time of the Aztecs.

From our inexpensive accommodations at the Hotel Cathedral, only half a block from the presidential place, we made cultural pilgrimages to all the important museums, cathedrals and palaces. An entire day was spent at the Museum of Anthropology — the finest in Central America — another day was spent at the pre-Aztec Temples of the Sun and Moon, believed to have been constructed by the Toltec people 1500 years ago. Some students visited the National Folk Ballet, others a bullfight. Only one of the team succumbed to the vicissitudes of the new cuisine and remained incapacitated in his room.

THE VOLCANO was never far from our minds. From the roof of our hotel we could watch the sun rise over the north side of Popocatepetl highlighting its monumental form. The early morning light glistened on the copper-domed cathedrals and churches. The snowfields of the volcano's western flanks glowed red in the evening with the last light of the setting sun, a color amplified to a more surrealistic hue by the ample particulate matter hanging over the city.

The Aztec name Popocatepetl is translated, the Smoking Mountain. The legend has it that Popocatepetl had his eye on Iztaccihuatl (The Sleeping Woman), daughter of the Aztec Emperor. Popocatepetl, on returning from a victorious campaign to claim his beloved Iztaccihuatl, was preceded by his rivals who sent word that he had been killed. Iztaccihuatl, learning of his death died with grief, whereupon Popocatepetl built the great mountains, which lie 40 miles east of Mexico City to perpetually mourn their unconsummated love. On one he laid her body, on the other he stands holding the eternal funeral flame.

Before the Spanish conquest both these mountains were worshipped as deities, but all that changed with the advent of Catholicism. Today the mountains enjoy the protection of National Park status and are visited by great numbers of people, particularly around Christmas time.

In 1540, Popocatepetl erupted spewing volcanic ash, "15 leagues distant, and burned the herbs in their gardens, their fields of corn, and clothes that lay a drying". Since that date the volcano has remained dormant. We hoped it would remain that way.

FROM THE HOTEL it took a good hour to drive through the immense and growing suburbs of Mexico City. A burgeoning population of landless poor and those escaping the crippling poverty and lack of opportunity in rural areas has led to the uncontrolled growth of enormous shantytowns which cloak entire hillsides. Houses of corrugated tin and cardboard perch precariously on cramped spaces hewn from the solid rock. Few have access to basic services of water, sewage or electricity. Enormous multi-story housing projects dot the sprawling suburbs, many of them new. These not unattractive looking projects are presumably part of the planners' response to a problem which plagues most of the world's developing countries. Tragically a growing population continues to outstrip even the most ambitious projects. Past the margins of the sprawling city and on beyond the irrigated farmlands which surround it, the land rises into dry, hilly, farming country reminiscent of northern California.

Peering through the bus window we catch our first glimpse of the volcano. "There it is," a student exclaims. Towering far above the clouds the great bulk of the mountain is impressive — much bigger than anything in the United States outside of Alaska. It is hard to believe that the snowfields in the sky are not clouds, but the outline of the mountain and the summit becomes clear and for the first time I see the incredulous look of disbelief in the eyes of our students. "That's the mountain we're going to climb!"

At Amecameca, a small town at the foot of Popocatepetl we stopped for lead free gas for our stoves, and at the colorful town market for victuals to last us for our six days on the mountain. Canned beans, tortillas, hot sauce, eggs and vegetables are piled into our packs, then a quick snack of pig stew at a market cafe, and we're on our way to the Vicente Guerrero Lodge which lies at 12,950 feet above sea level at the foot of the mountain; a remarkably high location for a lodge.

We are now 12,000 feet higher than our fellow mortals in Bloomsburg. We can feel it and pay the price. The onset of headaches and nausea are an unfortunate and unavoidable consequence of cavorting in high places, to which we all fell victim. One poor fellow, a Mexican tourist from lower altitudes collapsed in the corridor of the lodge just as we arrived, a victim of oxygen deprivation. An inauspicious beginning.

THE VINCENTE GUERRERO LODGE is located at the lowest point exactly between the two volcanoes, Popocatepetl and Iztaccihuatl at the upper edge of a pine forest (montezumae). Bunch grasses and lupines extend above the forest to around 13,500 feet. It is recorded that Fernandez Cortez stood at precisely this spot on his march to Mexico City in 1519 and from this place gazed down upon the great Aztec City. The view of Mexico City is still magnificent, though by day it is partially obscured by smog. At night the smog thins out and the entire valley sparkles, a luminous glow from a million lights. The view is truly wonderful but belies the extraordinary problems of this burgeoning city.

Of more pressing interest was the view of Popocatepetl cloaked in glaciers and partially shrouded by clouds which now seemed to tower over us as if reminding us of our intentions to climb it... and of our mortality!

Acclimatization, a physiological adaptation to reduced air pressure and availability of oxygen is crucial to climbing mountains at high altitudes. One consequence of inadequate acclimatization, and perhaps the most common, is the onset of pulmonary edema, a debilitating condition similar to pneumonia where the lungs eventually become filled with TEOTIHUACAN, established by the Toltec people 1,500 years ago and inhabited by an estimated 85,000 people. BU students can be seen sitting on top of the Temple of the Moon looking south toward the Temple of the Sun.

GROUP PHOTOGRAPH taken during one of our training days at the Vincente Guerrero Lodge. Poisonous sulphur gases coming from the center of the crater can be clearly seen. Group members were Jeffroy Kilo, Rhonda Smith, Tom Nurse, Robin Schulz, Tony Quartararo, Stephanie Paglaiccolli, Dan Foster, Mark Schiller, Valerie Porquet, Lyn Paris, John Herr, Sandy Hart, Signo Klinger, Roy Smith, Jed Smith, Hunter Baker, Mark Glowalski, Alex Shiner, Stephanie Johnson, Kurt Lieberman, Ken Wolff, Krislon Cunningham.

liquids. We took hikes into the surrounding area in an attempt to accelerate the process of acclimatization and test our bodies response to physical exertion.

Each day we became a little stronger, our appetites returned, and we were eager to move higher to the next camp which we had decided would be a point on the mountain named Los Cruces, a solitary place on the Northeast flank of the mountain at 14,400 feet where the death of two mountaineers attempting Popocatepetl is commemorated by two large tubular steel crosses.

Crosses are a fairly common sight in Mexico. The commemoration of poor souls who fall foul to any of life's multitude of mishaps is duly exercised by relatives who construct not only crosses where the mishap occurred but sometimes elaborate shrines that guard replicas of their favorite saint. This practice might be beneficially implemented in our own country. A succession of crosses along the margins of the highways might serve as a deterrent to those who need a reminder of their mortality.

OUT OF OUR BUNKBEDS by 6 a.m. we watched a spectacular sunrise over Pico Orizabo, another volcano even higher than Popocatepetl, some 50 miles to the east.

Cooking, using gasoline stoves is allowed only outside the lodge to avoid its destruction by fire. After a substantial breakfast of frioles, huevos con pane we began the long slow plod carrying 40 pound packs to Los Cruces. Very quickly we rise above the last of the pine forest. Another thousand feet and we are above the bunch grasses and lupines and enter the unchallenged domain of vulcan. This is a landscape unmistakably created by violence and fire. Visions of historic eruptions with molten lava flowing down the mountain is sufficient for the most unimaginative to periodically pause and glance towards the rim. Large emissions of sulphur gases and steam create clearly discernable clouds over the mountain, particularly in the early morning when the air is cool and still. Our packs, although not more than fifty pounds, seem heavier than when we had casually thrown them on our backs at Bloomsburg. The pace was slow. The grunting and gasping became more audible with every foot of elevation, the rests more frequent and longer. We were beginning to feel good about the time we'd put into running up and down the Bloomsburg University stadium steps; it was also becoming apparent who hadn't put their time in. All the mindless exercise of the long months of Fall was beginning to pay handsome dividends.

Around 2 p.m. we arrived at Los Cruces, a small level area on the broad back of a volcanic ash spur, presumably carved by the glacier which is now slowly retreating up the mountain. In 1976 I had been at Los Cruces and the glacier was then next to the camp, now it was more than six hundred yards away. Global warming perhaps! The glacier being our only source of water necessitated considerable exertion followed by a lengthy stint of melting the ice into water.

Sleeping at 14,400' is not an easy task. Acclimatization should ideally occur at about 1000 feet of altitude gain per day which meant we would have benefited from a couple of extra days at the lower elevation of the lodge. Unadjusted to the altitude, the body continues to try and function as if it were much lower, particularly the breathing. Stokes breathing results, a phenomenon whereby the victim wakes up gasping for air creating great consternation among tent mates and those in adjoining tents. Stokes breathing is caused by the body's demand for air being inadequately met — the sudden and noisy gasping results from a breathing rhythm which works fine at sea level but is too slow in the rarified air, causing a sudden onset of convulsive breathing.

We decided to go to bed early and rise at 4 a.m. the following morning, to make an attempt on the summit. It was dark by 6:30 p.m.. The cold air rolled down the mountainside driving us into the warmth and oblivion of our sleeping bags.

THE PRE-DAWN HOURS find the human condition at a generally low ebb. Surprisingly, motivation to leave a warm sleeping bag and venture out to take care of ablutions, start the stove and prepare a breakfast of oat meal — our breakfast of choice — is not low. Forty miles to the west, Mexico City was spread out below us in an extraordinary luminous show of the city's lights. Pueblo, to the east, the second largest city in Mexico, was also aglow with lights.

By the time breakfast oatmeal had been forced down and everyone was ready to leave camp, the first hint of dawn appeared. A streak of red spread across the tropical sky highlighting Mexico's highest mountain, Pico Orizabo, whose summit soars more than a thousand feet higher than that of Popocatepetl's. Before daylight we were on our way, stumbling along a narrow, sometimes icy, ill-defined trail, traversing east around the mountain, from where we hoped to find access to the summit.

The altitude slowed down our pace, and frequent stops were necessary for everyone to rest and recover. By 11 a.m. we were above 16,000 feet. At 1 p.m. we were within striking distance of the summit but decided to take a food break, rest a little and then climb the last few hundred feet to the rim of the crater which we knew was close on account of the occasional blasts of sulphur fumes which spewed out over the rim.

WE WERE ALL SITTING on rock ledges eating lunch when the mountain trembled. I could feel the grinding and pounding of rocks deep in the earth. It lasted only for a few seconds. There was silence. No one spoke as we looked at each other in disbelief. "Did you feel that? Everyone suddenly spoke at once? Oh my god, I thought, the volcano's erupting! My first reaction was to look for an escape route down the mountain while simultaneously wondering if it would be possible to outrun the lava. Fortunately, there was no recurrence, but the shake had pumped a little adrenalin into our veins, revitalizing us more than the rest.

We were now above the volcanic ash which forms the bulk of the volcano and had moved onto a series of ledges which led precariously to the very edge of the crater. One moment we were on steep rock, the next on the edge of an abyss which dropped vertically a thousand feet into the very depth of the crater, from which large volumes of sulphur gas were being vented. The smell was nauseating which only compounded our headaches, diminishing even further the already inadequate amount of oxygen. We had arrived at the lowest point of the crater's rim at around 17,000 feet. The terrain which we would have had to traverse to reach the true summit of the mountain looked too dangerous to attempt with a party the size and experience of ours. Reluctantly we had to descend, arriving back at the Los Cruces camp by late afternoon, quite tired.

Not a voice was heard in camp that evening. By 8 p.m. we were all fast asleep.

Unbelievably, by 5 a.m. the following morning the majority of the group decided they were prepared to make a second attempt for the summit. By 6 a.m. we were once more plodding our weary way up the mountain. Just before noon we again reached the rim. We could see where we had been thwarted the previous day but now we could also see our way clear to the snow covered summit which rose above us for another 800 feet. As we walked along the edge of the crater towards the snowfields there were a surprising number of shrines marking the places where unfortunate climbers had presumably stumbled over the rim to their inevitable doom. The natural reaction was to move a little away from the rim and contemplate some brighter prospect. Where the rim begins to steepen is where the mountain is flanked by glaciers. Here we paused to rest and put on our crampons — devices which enabled us to negotiate steep snow and ice without slipping. Climbing ropes and ice axes were now used, four climbers to a rope. The idea being that if one member of the group should slip the others would be able to arrest the fall. In this manner, we moved cautiously and slowly towards the summit. At 2:30 p.m. we could climb no higher. We had arrived on the summit of Popocatepetl, tired but very happy.

SO WHAT! SOME MIGHT SAY. So you climbed a mountain in Mexico. What does it all mean?

One benefit was that it provided many of our students with their first cross cultural experience.

By every turn of the clock we move closer to a more integrated world economy. A United Europe represents a market place 30% larger than our own. To compete successfully in those markets we will have to understand people who live on the other side of the planet, speak different

Harry Humes '64 has been awarded a $20,000 Creative Writing Fellowship by the National Endowment for the Arts. He was one of 97 grantees chosen from a pool of over 2,000 applicants from 49 states, the District of Columbia, the U.S. Virgin Islands and eight foreign countries.

These grants were designed to allow individual creative writers of excellence or promise to devote themselves fully to their writing. Through its grants to creative writers, the Literature Program has funded some of this country's most respected authors and poets, including John Berryman, Alice Walker, Raymond Carver, Grace Paley, Isaac Bashevis Singer, John Gardner, Marge Piercy and John Ashbery.

"It is our hope that these grants will free writers to follow their vision, wherever it takes them," said Chairman John Prohman. "By assisting so many writers from so many parts of the country, the Endowment hopes to play some small part in nurturing a literature that truly reflects the immense diversity of the United States."

Humes, a native of Girardville, is an assistant professor of English at Kutztown University. He and his wife and daughter live in Breinigsville.

Humes will use the fellowship to take a leave from his teaching duties, during which time he hopes to finish a new book and travel to Washington State.

"We'll be exploring a couple different places," Humes said. "One is the town where Raymond Carver, one of my heroes, used to live."

The following excerpt appeared in an article written by Brian B. Berkenstock, correspondent for the Reading Eagle-Times:

The connections between literature, man and nature are familiar to Humes; his poems are interspersed with references to such local sites and concerns as Hawk Mountain, the Susquehanna River, and the men and mines of the coal country.

"I like poems about nature," Humes said. "I like poems about family. I like poems about work. But they are not absolutes."

Humes' first poem appeared when he was 27, and his first book was published when he was 48.

"Most of my writing colleagues had their NEAs when they were in their 30s. Here I am in the 50s. They were faster at it than I."

"I was working, but I just couldn't pull it off, and obviously there's a lot of discouragement and uncertainty as to whether I'd ever do anything. I felt I had the talent, and I felt it was just a matter of time, but you wait 20 years; that's a long time. You can give up on a lot of things in 20 years."

His first published work appeared in 1962 and he has continued steadily since that time. In addition to works in such literary magazines as Antaeus, Virginia Quarterly, and Missouri Review, his poems have been included in numerous anthologies.

"Something happened in my 40s, where I just shifted my focus a little bit, and I couldn't even tell you how, but I shifted something and everything came into place. Not everything, but it seemed to start working a lot better."

"I was getting a handle on my subject, and the language became better and more honest, I think. And the books started happening, and I started winning some prizes and people started inviting me around (public readings), and one thing led to another... leading to this."

Books of poetry by Humes include Winter Weeds, Ridge Music, and the soon-to-be released, The Way Winter Works.

His poems have also been collected in limited-edition form under the titles: "A Weather of Surprises," "Throwing Away the Compass," and "Robbing the Pillars."

This last collection draws heavily from his background in the coal region of northeastern Pennsylvania. "It's the primary landscape I relate to," Humes said.

A three-time winner of the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts Fellowship Grant, Humes has published short fiction and essays, and is the founder and editor of the poetry journal, Yarrow.

He earned a master of fine arts in creative writing at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

"When you start writing, it starts triggering. One idea will spawn two or three on the margins."

For this reason, the poetry of Harry Humes is certain to continue. As the author himself puts it, "that's my primary flow, the poems."

Karen Keller Peltzer '64 has received a Masters of Education in Reading from Shippensburg University.

James Setcavage '64, business teacher at Tamaqua Area High School, has co-authored a textbook entitled DDC: Desktop Publishing. The book, he said, emphasizes a hands-on approach to teaching students how to create the memorandum forms, letterheads, advertisements, newsletters and other computer-generated products.

Sandy Thornton '64 (Mrs. Robert F.

Cubbins) has been having a gratifying year. She and two of her immediate neighbors, whom she talked into supporting her idea for a new social program more than a year ago, were recently honored by being designated as New York's Warren County volunteers of the Year. Teacher of a class of four and five year old language impaired students for the Boces Unit, and former teacher of socially and emotionally maladjusted students, Sandy has seen the need for emergency shelter for youngsters in crisis and acted upon her concerns. She and her neighbors saw their first home certified by the state to take temporary charge of children in crisis this past spring after "...more than a year of asking, cajoling, questioning, and pressuring county and state agencies." Sandy evidently used some of those political skills she acquired as member of Williamstown City Council in the mid-seventies.

Sandy is also doing her part for the ecosystem. The national Wildlife Federation announced in mid-November that her 125' x 50' backyard has been designated as a certified backyard wildlife habitat, a link in the organizations nationwide network of mini-refuges for wildlife in residential neighborhoods, at schools, and places where people work.

Sandy considers her activities nothing out of the ordinary for someone whose family values always included public service and who attended Bloomsburg at a time when those same public service values were encouraged. (How many times did we hear, "You're educated. You're capable. It's your duty to do things for your community.")

Sandy is living in Glenn Falls, NY.

Jim has released a third cassette, "Adult Dose," which shows the highly acclaimed singer-songwriter to be emerging as a multi-stringed instrumentalist in the mode of a David Lindley, according to a release from his producer, Maynard Records.

"Here he tackles a variety of guitars, balalaika, mandolin, bass and Hawaiian lap steel, giving his tunes a rich, colorful texture. But, as with his critically praised "Father's Concern" and "Only One," the true strength of Lyman rests in his intense, poignant tunes. . . . Lyman's material flaunts a variety of styles. Never disjointed, he keeps things together with his highly gripping and personal lyrics."

Lyman holds down a regular gig at South Jersey's premier folk club, The Dead Dog Saloon, while making quick jaunts to play the folk club and college circuits. "A totally engaging and confident performer, he's been known to whip out a frenzied version of 'Wild Thing,' only to follow it with a pleading interpretation of 'In My Hour of Darkness.' Subscribing to the NRHQ train of thought, he's not timid about taking risks on stage, as he freely improvises and attempts tunes for the first time while in front of an audience. Don't think Lyman is a human jukebox, as most of his sets consist of his own material, and already numbers from 'Adult Dose' are becoming crowd favorites."

YEARBOOK DILEMMA: For some inexplicable reason, not everyone in the Class of 1985 received a yearbook. Nor are there any yearbooks left over. We're trying to provide a happy ending for those class members who didn't get their yearbooks. If you received a 1985 yearbook by mistake, or if you received two copies, please contact the Alumni Office. Or if you are a two-yearbook family, would you consider donating one of them to a classmate who doesn't have one? Thanks.

Bloomsburg University is committed to providing equal educational and employment opportunities for all persons without regard to race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, ancestry, life style, affectional or sexual preference, handicap, Vietnam era status as veterans, or union membership. The university is additionally committed to affirmative action and will take positive steps to provide such educational and employment opportunities.

Proposed revisions in Constitution to be considered at Annual Meeting on Alumni Day, April 28, 1990

(Deletions have line drawn through them;
new wording is underlined.)

ARTICLE I Name and Object

Section 1. This corporation shall be known as the ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF BLOOMSBURG UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA, INC.

Section 2. It is the object of the Association to promote the cause of education by fostering and maintaining among its members a spirit of cooperation with the Administration, Faculty, Staff and Students of ~~Bloom~~ Bloomsburg University.

ARTICLE II Government and Officers

Section 1. Elective Officers. The elective officers of this Association shall be a president, a vice president, a secretary and a treasurer, each of whom shall be elected for a period of one year by majority vote of those in attendance at the annual reorganization meeting of the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association Board of Directors, hereinafter referred to as the Board, as provided in Article X, Sections 3 and 4 of this Constitution and By-Laws.

Section 2. Alumni Board. ~~The Alumni Board shall consist of twenty-four members beginning June 6, 1987. On that date, ten members shall be elected, with five to serve two-year terms and five to serve one-year terms as determined by drawing lots. Thereafter, twelve members shall be elected each year to serve a term of two years. A member may be elected for two additional two-year terms. Beginning in 1987 no person may serve more than six years in succession.~~ Board of Directors. The Board of Directors shall consist of twenty-four members elected on a staggered basis to serve a two-year term. A member may be elected to serve no more than three consecutive two-year terms excluding time served completing an unexpired Board member's term. The term of office for newly elected board members shall begin at the annual reorganizational meeting of the Board. After a lapse of one year, said individual may be elected again to the Board in conformance with this Constitution, as heretofore stated. Retiring directors may be elected to honorary life memberships on the Board if they have served at least 14 years on the Board. Honorary life members of the Board shall not be counted in determining the presence of a quorum, nor shall they have a vote in matters before the Board.

Section 3. A president may succeed himself/herself at the discretion of the nominating committee and subsequent election at the annual reorganization meeting of the Board. A president whose regular term on the Board has expired shall automatically become an ex-officio member of the Board for one year.

Section 4. Any vacancy occurring in any office or in any position as Board members, during the interval between annual meetings, shall be filled by a majority vote of the remaining members of the Board for a term to expire at the next annual meeting of the members. Any vacancy which may occur in any position of the Board at the time of any annual meeting shall be filled by a majority vote of the members for the unexpired term of the vacancy involved. Any vacancy occurring on the Board shall be filled by majority vote of the remaining members of the Board. Said elected person shall serve the remainder of the unexpired term. Completion of an unexpired term shall count toward honorary life membership service yet shall not prohibit said person from serving three consecutive two-year terms.

Section 5. The Board may authorize the election of such additional officers as may be deemed necessary. Likewise, the Board may declare any position vacant when the person in that position is absent without reason for three or more consecutive meetings.

Section 6. The President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer shall serve on the Executive Committee. The Alumni Director will serve as an ex-officio member. The Executive committee will meet prior to all Board of Directors meetings to prepare and discuss the agenda.

Section 7. The President and Vice President Executive Committee will serve as ex-officio members on all committees as set forth in Article VIII, Section 2.

Section 8. When requested by the university, the President and Alumni Director will jointly appoint a member/members of the Board of Directors to represent the Alumni Association.

ARTICLE III President

Section 1. The President shall preside at all meetings of the Association and of the Board of Directors and shall perform such other duties as the Association or Board of Directors may assign to him/her. He/she shall sign all written contracts of the Association or designate the Director of Alumni Affairs, in writing, to sign in his/her place. In the President's absence, the Vice President shall assume and perform his/her duties.

ARTICLE IV Secretary

Section 1. The Secretary shall give notice of all meetings of the Association and the Board of Directors and shall record the minutes of said meetings. He/she shall be custodian of the seal of the corporation.

ARTICLE V Treasurer

Section 1. The treasurer shall be responsible for handling the financial affairs of the corporation. He/she shall prepare financial statements and shall report thereon at each regular meeting of the Board. He/she shall pay all bills when certified for payment by the Director of Alumni Affairs or the President or Vice President of the Association. A board member shall be designated to sign checks and vouchers in the Treasurer's absence. The Association shall secure a bond to cover officers and employees who handle Association funds in the performance of their duties.

ARTICLE VI Board of Directors

Section 1. The Board of Directors shall have general charge and sole management and control of all the funds and property of the corporation, and shall carry out its purposes, subject to the By-Laws. It shall report on the Activities of the Association at each annual meeting or in THE ALUMNI QUARTERLY.

Section 2. A director shall not be personally liable as a director for monetary damages for any action taken, or any failure to take any action, unless the director has breached or failed to perform the duties of his office under Section 8363 of Title 42 (Judiciary and Judicial Procedure) of the Pennsylvania Consolidated Statutes, and the breach or failure to perform such duties constitutes self-dealing, willful misconduct or recklessness. This section shall not apply to the responsibility or liability of a director pursuant to any criminal statute, or the liability of a director for the payment of taxes pursuant to local, State or Federal law, nor shall this section apply to any actions filed prior to the date of the amendment adding this section to the by-laws, nor to any breach or performance of duty or any failure of performance of duty by a director prior to such date. NO amendment to or repeal of this section shall apply to or have any effect on the liability or alleged liability of any director for, or with respect to, and acts or omissions of such director occurring prior to such amendment or repeal.

Section 2.3. The regular meetings of the Board of Directors shall be held at least four times a year. Special meetings shall be called by the order of the President or upon the written request of any two members of the Board. A majority of the Directors shall constitute a quorum.

Section 3.4. Said Board shall have power to frame rules for its own regulation and transaction of business.

Section 4.5. The Executive Committee shall be made up of the elected officers, the Director of Alumni Affairs, and any others so designated by the Board.

ARTICLE VII

Director of Alumni Affairs

Section 1. The Director of Alumni Affairs of the University shall be responsible for planning and coordinating all the activities of the Association. He/she will organize and implement alumni-related programs on campus, assist with fund-raising drives, have editorial responsibilities for various publications and serve either as Chair or as a member of campus alumni affairs committees.

He/she shall be responsible directly to the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association of Bloomsburg University Alumni Association on matters solely of Association nature. He/she shall coordinate all alumni activities and report to the Bloomsburg University Vice President for Institutional Advancement.

He/she shall confer with administrators, faculty, students, alumni and the general public to secure support for alumni projects and activities. He/she shall work with organizations at both local, state, and national levels to maintain and upgrade the quality of the total alumni program.

ARTICLE VIII Committees

Section 1. The President shall appoint, subject to the approval of the Board of Directors, such committees from the membership of the Association as he/she may see fit to create for assistance in the performance of his/her duties. The President may delegate to such duly constituted committees the authority to collect, receive, and disburse funds, make necessary expenditures, and to manage the particular activity of the Association delegated to them.

Section 2. The following standing committees shall be appointed jointly by the President and Alumni Director. All Board members will serve on at least three committees.

A. Budget and Finance Committee. This committee will prepare and recommend the annual budget for the Alumni Association and offer recommendations on other financial matters.

B. Loans, Grants, and Scholarship Committee. Student Loans and Grants Committee. This committee will recommend changes in loan policies and procedures as needed, monitor the needs of students and the amount of money available for loans; recommend the amount of money available each year for loans; and recommend additions and deletions in the scholarship program, including amounts of grants and names for new or existing scholarships.

C. Property Committee. This committee will advise and make recommendations regarding the operation of the Fenstermaker Alumni House and Alumni Room in Carver Hall as well as recommending action on disposal or acquisition of furniture, equipment and property.

D. Fund-Raising Committee. This committee will be organized as needed and will advise and make recommendations on matters pertaining to fund raising projects.

E. Awards and Recognition Committee. This committee will seek, review, and recommend nominations for the "Distinguished Service" awards and "Young Alumni of the Year" awards; serve in an advisory and recommending capacity in recognizing alumni as they reach a certain lifetime giving plateau, and assist in planning for recognition of alumni as the need arises.

F. Alumni Weekend/Homcoming Committee. Special Events. This committee will assist in making plans for Alumni Weekend, (e.g. selection of date, programs, and special features; accommodations; pricing the weekend package and per-day costs; and other special features) and Homcoming Weekend, (e.g. conception after football game; selecting location for dinner; menu selection; program; and other special features) and any other special events.

G. Chapters and Student Relations. This committee will assist in developing policies and principles for implementing the alumni Chapter program, assist in developing the schedule of Chapter meetings each year; advise the Alumni Director concerning programs for Chapter meetings; act as liaison with the Husky Ambassadors and/or the Student Alumni Association, and to review and recommend programs to involve students in Alumni Association activities.

H. Long Range Planning. This committee will review, update, and implement the mission, goals, and objectives contained in the Long Range Plan of the Alumni Association.

ARTICLE IX Membership

Section 1. Membership in the corporation shall be limited to those persons who shall belong to any of the following classifications:

A. Graduates of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute, of the Bloomsburg State Normal School, of the State Teachers College at Bloomsburg, Pa., of the Bloomsburg State College and/or Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania.

B. Former students who were duly enrolled and in regular attendance at any of the said schools for a period of one full school year have earned at least 24 credits at Bloomsburg University.

ARTICLE X Meetings and Elections

Section 1. There shall be an annual meeting of the corporation on such day of each year as may be designated by the Board of Directors of this Association, as "Alumni Day." At such meeting, members of the Board of Directors shall be elected. A Nominating Committee, appointed by the President, shall offer a slate of candidates. Nominations may also be made by any member of the corporation at the time of the said meeting. Elections shall be by a voice vote of the members of the corporation, unless a written ballot is requested by at least five members. A Nominating Committee appointed by the president of the Alumni Association shall offer a slate of candidates for Board of Directors and Officers.

Section 2. There shall be an Annual Meeting of the corporation on such day of each year as may be designated by the Board. At such meeting, the report of the Nominating Committee for Board Members shall be presented. Nominations may also be made by any members of the corporation at the time of said meeting. Elections shall be by a voice vote of the members of the corporation, unless a written ballot is requested by at least five members.

Section 3. The term of office for newly elected Board members shall begin immediately after election at the Annual Meeting.

Section 3.4. The Nominating Committee will present a slate of officers to the Board at the Annual Reorganizational meeting. Nominations may also be made by any member of the Board. Elections shall be by voice vote of the members of the Board.

Section 5. The term of office for newly elected officers shall begin immediately after election at the Annual Reorganizational Meeting. The newly elected officers will conduct the business of the reorganizational meeting.

Section 2.6. The order of business at the annual meetings shall be that generally adopted and followed by corporations similar to this one.

Section 3.2. Special meetings of the corporation may be called by the President upon the request of the Board of Directors, or upon the written request of any nine members of the Board, or 50 members of the Association. Such request, as well as the notice of any special meeting, shall state the purpose for which the meeting is called, and no subject not so stated shall be considered at such special meeting. Ten days notice of such meetings shall be given to each member by written communication mailed to his or her last named address, or by publication in the quarterly bulletin of the corporation.

ARTICLE XI Seal

Section 1. The common or corporate seal of the corporation shall be round, inscribed with the name "Alumni Association of the Bloomsburg University" arranged in the form of a circle on the outer edge, and the words "Incorporated 1933" arranged across the inside of the circle.

ARTICLE XII Amendments

Section 1. This Constitution may be amended at any meeting of the corporation, annual or special, by vote of two-thirds of the members present. At least one month written notice of the proposed amendments shall be given by mail to all members of the Association for whom an address is known, or by publication in THE ALUMNI QUARTERLY. All proposed amendments shall be submitted in writing to the Secretary, accompanied by a request for their adoption by at least ten members.

ARTICLE XIII Dissolution

Section 1. Dissolution shall mean the ending or termination of the Association as an active organization which shall come about for any reason including legal action, voluntary action on the part of the membership, or for any reason which shall involve surrender or forfeiture of the Charter, but which shall not be limited to these reasons.

Section 2. Upon dissolution of this Association, for any reason, all monies and funds, including obligations then owing to said Association on account of unpaid student loans, all trust funds however held and including the principal and income then due on said funds or to become due thereafter, all bank deposits and accounts and all monies in the hands of or under the control of any officers of the Association, shall, as soon as legally possible, be turned over to and become the property of Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, or its successors, and which shall be held by said organization separate and apart from the general University Funds, monies received from the State System of Higher Education and/or the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or collected from the students thereof. All such funds and monies turned over to the Bloomsburg University shall then be administered by the proper officials of said University and used by them for educational purposes and which purpose shall include, but not limited to, student loans, scholarships and memorials. In the event that the said Bloomsburg University or its successors shall have been dissolved by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education or be unwilling or unable to accept them, all properties of this Association shall be turned over to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education for similar purposes.

Items needed for archives

Roger W. Fromm of the University Archives reports a dearth of photographs on the following subjects: B-Club, caretaker's cottage, storage barn, naval training units (World War II), Callieplan Literary Society, and Philogian Literary Society.

Anyone who would like to donate photos of these subjects should call the Alumni Office (1-800-526-0254).

Also needed are copies of The Alumni Quarterly, Volumes 26 and 27, covering the years from 1920 through 1926.

something I want to show you people."

Asked how he would respond to critics who might disapprove of sharing technology with communist countries, Bailey points out that he's never been a political person.

"I just have an open mind about these things. Obviously, I support democracy and not communism," he says. "I just think that the whole world has got some pretty rigid thinking, not only from country to country, but within religions. We really have some archaic thoughts. And with communication systems the way they are today, we ought to be learning how to cooperate with each other and how to help each other, rather than being a threat to each other.

"I think the Soviet Union is making some very strong initiatives to reach the outside world. Gorbachev is a different leader than they've ever had," he says, then adds with a smile: "That's another issue right now — is Gorbachev going to remain their leader long enough for me to get there!"

At the mention of the phrase, "once in a lifetime," Bailey says quickly, "I'm hoping it's not once in a lifetime, if we can get some kind of lasting relationship."

That's BU President Ausprich's hope, too. "We're going there with a very open mind and a very positive kind of spirit," he says. "Who knows what can happen?"

Except for the $885 round-trip airfare to Moscow, the Soviets are picking up the tab for the BU delegation. Dates for the 10-day visit have not yet been set, although both sides are shooting for this spring.

Meanwhile, Bailey and Rizvanov have to work out some long-distance logistical problems, such as how to get the computers to the Soviet capital and how to operate them on Soviet electrical current.

"I've already asked Apple to put four units over there for me and guarantee that they would work. I'm not familiar with how to set up a system in a country that's got a different source of power than us, but they are. So if I can just get them to cooperate and see that there's something in it for them I know they want to be there more, so maybe they'll see this as an opportunity to make some headway."

If not, Bailey will take his own computers and take his chances. "I don't know what to expect. I do a tremendous amount of traveling, and when you're carting equipment around you never know whether it's going to work. I've been pretty lucky in five years. We're bound to run into some difficulties, but we'll work around it."

Bailey is every bit as confident about the future of his specialty as he is about his ability to pull off this trip.

"I think within five to eight years you're going to see everybody with these in their homes. You want to know how to play golf — go down to K-mart, buy a little disc, pop it in your IAV machine or whatever it's called, then there will be some kind of control unit that works off the television. You'll be able to correct your swing, all kinds of crazy things. You want to learn how to bowl? You want to learn how to date? You want to learn algebra? For $29.95 or whatever, you go buy a disc, pop it in and you get a whole lot of home learning."

As IAV becomes more common, he explains, it will become more compact. "It will be a little unit, much like portable CD players today," Bailey says. "You're going to get more and more information in a smaller and smaller space, which will make it less and less expensive."

Will the day ever dawn when all human knowledge is stored in computers and displayed on screens? A day when mankind can live and learn without the printed word?

"Television's here to stay and so are computers," Bailey says. "But I don't think IAV is, or should be portrayed, as solving all our problems. It's just another vehicle."

"Now, will the thing ever get so sophisticated that it becomes a cure-all? I don't think I'd ever see it."

languages, have values which are quite different from yours and mine. How do we compete? First perhaps by appreciating their cultures, their complex needs, their ideology, and very different world view. This is hard to do on the Bloomsburg Campus or in Pennsylvania.

Foreign students on our campus are a start to understanding the larger world but the principal benefit of that relationship accrues to the foreign students who have made the effort to come here — it only marginally helps us to understand them. Fortune will perhaps favor those who venture out to look at how other people do things and then incorporate those ideas into their own. I believe many of our students benefited from their journey to Mexico and their meeting with Mexican people in museums, markets, and and on the mountain. We went to look and learn and came away richer for the experience.

REUNION PLANNED — Black alumni of Bloomsburg University are planning the second annual Black Alumni Day which will be held on Friday and Saturday, April 27 and 28, 1990. Attending a planning session in Philadelphia were (seated) Gwen Hall, Vernon Rochester, Jocelyn Youngblood, Deborah Whitaker, Carla McPhatter; (standing) Michael Harvey, Gerald Gay, Ricardo Youngblood, Wayne Whitaker, Michael Williams, Deborah Hill Walker, Brian Butcher, Mark Moseley and Donald Tones.

AT SSHE RECEPTION — Dr. James H. McCormick (second from left), chancellor of the State System of Higher Education and president emeritus of Bloomsburg University, chats with BU alumni Michelle Weaver Bender '74, Steve Andrejack '74 and Charlos Bonder '75 during the recent reception for alumni of the State System of Higher Education living in the Harrisburg area. The event was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Council of Alumni Associations, the organization of the 14 SSHE alumni associations.

AT SSHE RECEPTION — Representing Bloomsburg University at a recent reception for alumni of the State System of Higher Education living in the Harrisburg area were (seated) Marcia Klinger Sweitzer '75, Sharon Gettel Olff '78, Donna Kinder '80, Robert W. Surridge '75, (standing) James E. Holland '78, Tom Sweitzer '75, Charles (Tom) Wertz '69, Scott Behrent '82, and Mark Beatty '87.

BU license plate for alumni and friends

In response to numerous requests, we offer you Bloomsburg University license plates for your motor vehicles. These special plates, produced and distributed by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation, may be used in place of your regular license plate issued by PennDOT. State officials indicate that the entire process, from design to delivery, takes about nine months.

Before PennDOT will initiate the process, however, we must have at least 500 paid orders. If you would like one of these special plates, please complete the order form below and send it with a check for $20.00 (payable to BU Foundation) to: Fenstermaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

All orders must be received by June 1, 1990, at which time we will proceed with the project or refund your money.

Opportunities and expectations

By G. THOMAS HUGHES III '76
President, Alumni Association
Opportunities.

That's what I would like to talk about in this, my first message to you as president of our Alumni Association. As background for my comments, let me share some discussion which took place at our last meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors.

During the course of the meeting, Doug Hippenstiel, our director of alumni affairs, reported on the BU watch program which was offered to you last fall. To date, 150 watches had been sold, resulting in a profit of $3,750 for the Alumni Association. Doug said the marketing company (Diamond-Brostrom, Inc., of Wayne, Pennsylvania) was pleased with the response and was now recommending a similar program to offer a Bloomsburg University lamp, an authentic solid brass reproduction of an antique column lamp dating from the early 19th century. The university seal would be mounted in the base.

Although the directors thought the lamp was very attractive, some wondered if it were too soon to offer another program of this kind. Others wondered if alumni make a distinction between the watch or lamp program and solicitations for the Annual Fund or the Trust for Generations Campaign. In other words, do alumni consider a watch or lamp program just another plea for money? We decided the answer in many cases is probably yes.

We're part of the global community

(Editor's Note: In late April and early May, President Harry Ausprich visited the Soviet Union as the guest of the U.S.S.R.'s Academy of Sciences. Among those accompanying him was Dr. James E. Parsons, director of international education at Bloomsburg University. President Ausprich invited Dr. Parsons to write the following article about the importance of the university community becoming contributing members of the global community.)

By JAMES E. PARSONS, Ph.D.
Director of International Education

An endless succession of transformations has swept across the globe in the latter months of the eighties and since the beginning of our new decade; not the least among them has been a series of major modifications in the world that will have a profound effect on available educational opportunities for students of all ages and cultures.

Glasnost, perestroika, the massacre in Tien An Men Square, the dawning of the European Economic Community in 1992, the first protesters at a May Day Parade in Moscow (since the time of Lenin), the long overdue release of Nelson Mandela, emigration from the Eastern bloc countries including Albania, the pending reunification of Germany, Quebec on the brink of succession — these and other developments have combined to revolutionize our concept of the world as a classroom without walls.

Just as in our history the emigrants from other lands sowed the symbolic and literal seeds from which sprang the roots of a nation now widely known and emulated as America, we as a university must meet the challenge now being presented, viz.: that the process of exchange and cross-fertilization continue in both directions. How do we accomplish these goals? One way is by encouraging international experiences for our alumni, faculty, staff and/or students.

Then someone asked, "What do our alumni think our expectations are? Do they think we expect them to give to every appeal, to buy everything that's offered for sale?" Again, we decided the answer may be yes.

I would like to assure you that the answer is no. It would indeed be wonderful if everyone responded positively to every appeal and every special offer. But we live in the real world, too. We do not expect you to sit down and write a check everytime you receive mail from Bloomsburg. As your representatives on the Alumni Board of Directors, we see our role as one in which we offer you opportunities:

- To support University and Association projects with our gifts.

- To share and receive information through The Alumni Quarterly.

- To return to campus for Homecoming, Alumni Weekend and other special events.

- To meet other alumni and members of the University family at regional alumni events.

- To interact with current students through career days, internships and cooperative education experiences.

We hope that when you see mail from Bloomsburg, you will smile and consider it an opportunity. If you take advantage of it, we will be delighted; if you can't, we will understand. And if there are ways we can improve our service to you, please let us know.

By importing and exporting individuals representing a panoramic spectrum of cultural backgrounds and disciplines into a fertile academic atmosphere, where plentiful rain, sun and the turning of seasons will combine to create an ideal environment, these seeds will grow. The crop which we will nurture are citizens of the twenty-first century — those of a global community, caring, productive and peaceful individuals. A true legacy for our future!

In every great history there are larger-than-life characters, dramatic events, hallowed places, mythical tales of stirring adventures; but it is also true that every culture is a complex amalgam of positive and negative parts. So it is with our society; it too was born out of strife, travail and suffering. Just as the current generation is the product of one who so bravely faced the difficulties which new social conditions had imposed on them, subsequent ones will be the product of an endless succession of transformations. This is not just a Pennsylvania phenomenon, of course, it's national, even international.

As individuals on our planet, each of us, like it or not, will play a part in these transformations. As an educational institution we must assume a leadership role in this process. Clearly, a university must contribute more than its proportional share to the social and cultural unfolding of a global community. Change is inevitable and necessary; growth is not possible without it. More often than not, change is also unsettling, a mixture of positive and negative elements, of gains and losses — but a small price to pay for greater freedoms and a higher degree of understanding on a world-wide basis. If Bloomsburg University is to maintain its "edge of excellence," we must not only promote but espouse international based educational initiatives, not tourism but strong, academic programs that further global understanding.

Award recipients for 1990 honored

Eight individuals were honored by the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association at the annual Awards Dinner-Dance held on Alumni Day, April 28.

Recipients of Distinguished Service Awards were Francis "Red" Garrity '28, Jevita McCauley '54 and James J. Gallagher '64. The awards were established by the Alumni Association in 1948 to recognize alumni who have excelled in at least one area: Significant accomplishments in his or her profession; outstanding service to the University and/or the Alumni Association; or contributions to humanity. Since 1948, the Alumni Association has honored 94 alumni and administrators in this way.

Recognized as "Young Alumni of the Year" were Sharon Gettel Olff '78, Matti A. Prima '77, and Mark S. Schweiker '75. Established in 1985, these awards recognize alumni who have graduated within the past 25 years, have met one or more criteria for the Distinguished Service Award, and have demonstrated outstanding potential for further contributions in one of these categories.

Honored as "Honorary Alumni" were Colonel Harry Jenkins and Kenneth Gross. First instituted in 1985, this designation recognizes special individuals who have played a significant role in the life of the University. By their generous and caring spirit, they have set an example for all alumni to follow.

The awards were presented by Suzanne Cromack McCabe '71, chairperson of the Awards and Recognition Committee. The dinner-dance was held at 24 West, the banquet facility of Hotel Magee.

Francis A. Garrity Class of 1928

Garrity has served his alma mater faithfully for the past 11 years as coordinator of the South Florida Chapter of BU alumni. He has made local arrangements for annual chapter luncheons and has served as the "spark plug" by making telephone calls, sending postcards, and otherwise promoting the events.

This service was actually a continuation of his role as an active undergraduate at Bloomsburg. The son of a coal miner, Garrity came to college on an athletic (working) scholarship and quickly became involved in the life of the school. In addition to starring on the baseball field and basketball court, he was elected class president for three years and served as editor of the 1928 Obit (yearbook). But in May 1928, his world changed when his father died in a mine fire. As sole support of his family, he withdrew from school and took a job in the mines.

The following year, however, he was rescued from a bleak future in the coal mines by a recommendation from one of his professors, John Koch, to the Board of Education in Englewood, N.J., which hired him as a teacher. He subsequently completed requirements for his bachelor of science degree in 1931. For the next 43 years he devoted his life to the education of students in that city as teacher, coach and administrator. He retired in 1972 as assistant superintendent.

His professional memberships included Englewood Teachers Association (president), New Jersey Education Association, New Jersey Association of School Administrators, American Association of School Administrators, Bergen County (N.J.) Superintendents Association, Comparative Education Society, New York School Masters Association. He was a delegate to the first New Jersey Delegate Assembly and was a member of a European seminar and field study which visited Switzerland, Hungary, Bulgaria, Russia and East Germany in 1965.

Civic involvement in Englewood included the Rotary Club (president in 1952 and honorary member in 1977), chairman of $500,000 campaign to provide medical and dental aid for India, and the American Red Cross. Active in the latter charity for 16 years, he served on the Northern Valley Chapter board of directors (1955-1971), chairman of the campaign fund (1970-1971), president (1971), chairman of the Delaware-New Jersey Conference, chairman of the Youth Forum (1972) and member of the steering committee (1972).

Garrity also served on a number of mayors' committees: The Victory Homecoming for Dick Button (Olympic figure skating gold medalist), the Englewood Municipal Flag Design Committee (chairman), the Advisory Committee, the Youth Committee (chairman) and the Englewood Recreation Department (director). In Bergen County, he served as a member of the Juvenile Conference Committee and as chairman of the Youth Committee. He was a member of President Eisenhower's White House Conference on Youth.

After retiring to Boca Raton in 1972, he continued to be an active citizen. Service to the Royal Oak Hills Association included board of directors (1973-1989), president (1975), executive committee (1975-1989), and district five director (1973-1989). He also served on the board of directors and executive committee of the Federation of Boca Raton Homeowners Association, Inc. (1975-1989). He chaired the city's municipal golf course construction committee (1979-1980), served on the city's budget review committee (1980-1986) and the Palm Beach County's Southern Region Facilities Planning Committee.

Active for many years in Little League Baseball, he served as director for Region IV, which included New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Caribbean Islands, Central and South America and Europe. He also served on the Commissioner's Advisory Board and the National Rules Committee. He arranged for Puerto Rico's Little League champions to play in Region IV's Sectional Tournament in Lyndhurst, N.J.

In the New York Chapter of Eastern College Athletic Conference, he served as a baseball umpire, basketball referee and football referee from 1952 to 1962.

Over the years, he has received many awards and honors:

The B'Nai B'Brith Service to Youth Award (1958), dedication of the Englewood Little League Baseball Field to him (1961), Outstanding Community Service Award from Rutgers University/Bergen-Rockland Counties (1962), establishment of the F. A. (Red) Garrity Championship Basketball Trophy by the Bergen County Coaches Association (1967), Service Gavel Award from the Northern Valley Chapter of the American Red Cross (1964), Who's Who in American Education (1967), Bergen County Coaches Association Century Victory Award (1970), Meritorious Service Award from the Englewood Board of Education (1972), the New Jersey Interscholastic Coaches Association Award for Outstanding Contribution to the Coaching Profession (1974), the Howard Bollerman Memorial Award for Outstanding Contributions to New Jersey Basketball (1978), the Distinguished Service Award of the Royal Oak Hills Association (1989), and the Distinctive Service Award from the City of Boca Raton (1979-1980).

He and his late wife, Betty, are the parents of a daughter, Sharon Garrity Larkin of Houston, Texas. He also has two grandsons.

Jevita C. McCauley Class of 1954

Miss McCauley, like many Bloomsburg graduates, has devoted her professional life to teaching children. After graduation, she taught in Woodbury, N.J., for two and one half years, and then moved to the Pennsbury School District in Bucks County, where she taught for 32 years before retiring in 1988.

During that time, she witnessed a number of new trends in education, including modern math and open education. She worked with Encyclopedia Britannica in establishing and presenting a new program, and she was part of an editorial team working with second and third grade books. In the early 1970s, she was chosen as one of the first teachers in Bucks County to participate in open education.

Award recipients for 1990

a way of working with children in which they advance at their own speed and initiative.

But Miss McCauley was not a typical elementary school teacher. Throughout her teaching career, she used her physical disabilities to inspire her students. As an infant, she damaged her spine when she fell out of bed. When she was finally able to walk at age five, she was hit by a car, further limiting her walking ability.

But the setbacks in her life did not curb her drive to be a teacher and to show young children how to overcome limitations. Instead, she used her physical condition as a tool to show pupils how to use their strengths to the best of their ability.

"I do believe that that was one of my strengths in teaching — helping them to realize that life is a hard lesson to learn," she said. "The most important thing was to try."

The last ten years of her teaching career were spent in a school with low socio-economic children. Her genuine concern for children prompted her to challenge her school district to establish a new program for special children who cannot be placed in special education. The program was for transitional children based on Piaget's theory, using the multi-sensory approach to education.

Since retirement, she has served as a volunteer at Penn Valley School, tutoring special children, including a retarded child and two who are auditorily weak. She also works with the Red Cross, "giving me the hope and contentment needed to complete each day as a profitable and viable member of society."

Miss McCauley resides in Fairless Hills.

James J. Gallagher Class of 1964

Gallagher is employed by the Philadelphia School District as a science teacher assigned to the Franklin Institute. It is the only program in the nation in which public school teachers are placed in a major museum full time to teach public school children, using the resources of the museum. Each year he teaches 17,000 inner-city children in this unique program. Prior to accepting this assignment in 1966, he was an elementary math resource teacher at the Kirkbride School and a science specialist at the Greenfield School.

He was the first to incorporate two states (Pennsylvania and New Jersey) in an educational endeavor commemorating the bicentennial of the Constitution in 1987. Through his initiative and dedication, thousands of students in Philadelphia and Camden were afforded the opportunity to design, build and light model bridges in a competition. Winners in "The Diamond Project" were invited to participate in the lighting of the Benjamin Franklin Bridge in September 1987.

Legally blind, Gallagher started the first union local for physically challenged employees in the nation. He is the driving force behind Teachers with Special Needs, a Pennsylvania Federation of Teachers-supported advocacy group serving union members who have vision or hearing impairments, diabetes, muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis or other physical disabilities. He also serves on the board of directors of the Housing Consortium for Disabled Individuals, a group of public and private organizations, businesses and individuals who share the common goal of addressing the unique housing needs of physically disabled individuals.

He earned an M.Ed. degree in science curriculum at the University of Pennsylvania, and did post-graduate work in science at Drexel, Temple, and Penn State universities. He has written science articles for Science and Children and The American Teacher. A teacher, union leader, in-service leader and public speaker, Gallagher has received numerous commendations.

Gallagher resides in Philadelphia.

Sharon Faith Gettel-Olff Class of 1978

Ms. Gettel Olff has achieved an important goal in her life — becoming an elementary school principal. At the same time, she remains one of Bloomsburg University's most loyal and active alumni.

Prior to her appointment in November 1989 as principal in the Pine Grove Area School District, she was a teacher in the Northern Lebanon School District for 11 years. During that time, she was selected "Outstanding Young Educator" by the Hamburg Jaycees in 1986 and "Outstanding Young Educator" by the Pennsylvania Jaycees in 1987. That same year she was designated as an "Outstanding Young Woman of America."

Aside from her professional success, her "love affair" with Bloomsburg University continues unabated. She has not missed a Homecoming since she graduated, and she has attended every alumni chapter function held in the Reading and Harrisburg areas. She has been most active with the alumni sisters of her sorority, Lambda Alpha Mu, through two newsletters each year, a fall luncheon and a summer family picnic. She is, without doubt, one of the university's best boosters, whether with other alumni or with prospective students.

By her words and deeds, she clearly exemplifies the motto of her sorority: "Not for ourselves, but for all."

Matti A. Prima Class of 1977

"Prima is a high-finance deal-maker. His job is to bring together buyers and sellers of communications companies. That often means day-to-day dealings with media moguls and well-heeled investors with the financial clout to access hundreds of millions of dollars."

That's how Prima was described in a recent profile printed in the Asbury Park (N.J.) Press. The article went on: "For Prima, the father of three, this world of money and media barons couldn't be further from the economic class from which he emerged. The son of Estonian parents, Prima says he didn't begin to speak English until starting kindergarten in Lakewood, where he spent his younger years in a modest apartment."

At the time the article was written, Prima was employed as a managing director of Henry Ansbacher, Inc., a New York investment bank that specializes in communications companies. In that role, he managed and directed personnel and 30 transactions with a total value of $1.5 billion. Since then he has joined the Bank of Tokyo Trust Company as a vice president in charge of establishing international mergers and acquisitions for the Bank of Tokyo. He has recently initiated and reviewed a feasibility study for a $1 billion transaction to combine a European-based organization with an American-based operation.

Recognized as an expert in his field, Prima has been quoted in Wall Street Journal, Newsday, Presstime (The Journal of the American Newspaper Publishers Association), The New York Times, USA Today, The Denver Post and other publications.

In addition, Prima has been active on behalf of Estonian Americans and has formed "Citizens for a Better New Jersey." A long-term goal or dream is to run for governor of New Jersey.

He is married to the former Cheryl Lynn Hitchens, Class of 1978.

Mark S. Schweiker Class of 1975

When he was elected Bucks County commissioner in 1987, Schweiker, then 34, had already held elective public office for eight years, including service as a Middletown Township supervisor. As commissioner in a county with a population greater than three states, he is a strong advocate of fiscal soundness and has been successful in implementing programs to increase the productivity of those who serve Bucks County government.

Earlier this year, Schweiker was mentioned as a potential Republican candidate for lieutenant governor in the Primary Election. He subsequently decided not to enter the race.

A native Bucks Countian, he earned a master's degree from the Rider College Graduate Program in Administration in 1983. Prior to his election as county commissioner, he served in the securities industry as an investment manager with Merrill-Lynch and later as an evaluation consultant with McGraw-Hill. He is chairman of the Delaware Valley Regional Finance Authority and is a member of the United Way Board of Directors.

He and his wife, Katherine, are the parents of two children.

Kenneth S. Gross Honorary Alumnus

Gross, who attended the university as a student from 1970 to 1973, has donated a gift of $100,000 to support the university's scholarship program. At his request, the Bloomsburg University Foundation will develop a perpetual scholarship fund which will be used to assist non-traditional students and others who attend the university.

Gross is the former owner and president of Tri-State Securities Systems — a security alarm system business he and his brother started in their hometown of Philadelphia in 1977. He gained sole possession of Tri-State from his brother four years ago, but sold the business last September to another company.

From 1977 to 1989, Mr. Gross and his brother had opened additional Tri-State operations throughout Florida, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania, and in the metropolitan areas of Atlanta, Baltimore, Memphis and Washington, D.C. He continues to be a consultant to his former business.

Harry D. Jenkins Honorary Alumnus

A native of Forty-Fort, Lt. Colonel Jenkins would have been graduated from Bloomsburg in 1942, had world events not intervened. Like many other patriotic Bloomsburg students, he interrupted his college education to enlist in the U.S. Army Air Corps. After the war ended, he continued to serve in the U.S. Air Force until November 1964.

During that time, he served as instructor pilot, transport pilot, squadron commander, wing director of personnel, wing inspector and senior advisor for the Reserve Forces in the State of Oklahoma. His assignments took him to most states and throughout the world. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Force Commendation medal.

Although he did not return to finish his education at Bloomsburg, he attended night classes from Florida Southern College, the University of Maryland in Korea, and the University of Oklahoma. He eventually earned 127 credit hours verified by Oklahoma University, but no degree.

His ties to Bloomsburg remained strong, however, for he married a classmate, Lydia Repella. After Lydia died in March 1988, Jenkins established a perpetual scholarship at Bloomsburg University in her memory. Their son, Don, a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, was named for Harry's brother, an outstanding athlete at Bloomsburg who also interrupted his college days to serve his country. He died in the first bombing raid over the Ploesti oil fields.

RECALLING THE PAST — Eda Bessie Edwards '41, university historian and author of Profile of the Past: A Living Legacy, the history of the university since its founding in 1839, was one of the speakers at the rededication ceremony for "Old" Science Hall on Alumni Day.

'Old' is new again

By KIMBERLEIGH J. SMITH
News/Feature Writer, University Relations

Like the memory of a grandparent, the rededication of "Old" Science Hall restored an irreplaceable source of tradition in the Bloomsburg University lineage.

"I think it's great the way they preserved the name, and that they kept the outside the way it should be," Historian Eda Bessie Edwards said. She is the author of Profile of the Past: A Living Legacy, a historical account of the university.

"Most everybody who has graduated from Bloomsburg has had at least one class in it," she said. "It (the building) really does preserve the (Bloomsburg University) tradition."

Alumni, students, faculty and administrators gathered on Alumni Day (April 28) to honor that tradition and the building's new application. After a one and a half year, $3.3 million architectural overhaul, Old Science Hall was rededicated to the university as a reflection of Bloomsburg University's rich past, present and future.

Second only to Carver Hall in age, Old Science Hall was erected in 1906 for $100,000. It was then appropriately referred to as New Science Hall. The January 1907 edition of the Bloomsburg State Normal School Quarterly recorded its debut: "The new building is no longer a promise but a reality. Long lines of students wind their way, these pleasant spring days, across the old athletic field to work in the new quarters."

According to University Archive materials, the new quarters occupied 38,168 in total square feet and rested on what was the campus' first athletic field. The baseball infield was exactly where Old Science Hall is now located. The land was originally owned by John G. Freeze, a trustee of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute. According to Edwards, he served longer than any other individual in the school's history.

Judson P. Welsh, the principal of the Bloomsburg State Normal School at the time, deemed the construction of a science facility necessary. Old Science Hall originally housed laboratories, classrooms and lecture rooms for chemistry, physics and the natural sciences. The basement was notorious for its "eat lab," which accommodated live, small animals. Fish and reptiles were kept in the basement as well.

It was a modern facility with sloping floors, raised lecture platforms and motor-generated lantern slide machines. According to Edwards' research, the building also set a few records.

The first wireless equipment ever to be installed on a normal school campus was installed in Old Science Hall. Later, Old Science was the first normal school campus facility to transmit a wireless radio message. The message was sent on a windy day from Science Hall to Edward Tustin Jr. in his home, now the corner of Third and Market Streets.

Old Science Hall was not strictly limited to scientific and budding technological purposes, however. Art and music classes were taught in the building, and a few rooms were used for social club meetings.

The building was renovated in the late 1930s, adding what were then modern laboratory desks and other science equipment.

Clayton Hinkel '40 remembers that time well. Presently enjoying faculty emeritus status, Hinkel attended Bloomsburg as a state teachers college from 1936 to 1940. He returned as a professor of business education in 1947 and taught until retiring in 1980.

"I think I was either a student or faculty member in every room but the museum," Hinkel said. He holds particularly fond memories of his American government class, held on the fourth floor. Regardless of the newly-installed elevator, Hinkel made sure he visited the fourth floor — on foot — during Alumni Weekend.

Like Hinkel, James Sperry, chairperson of the department of history, has relocated several times within the building. In his 22 years at BU, Sperry has had offices on three floors of the four-story building.

"I learned to like the building and its character," Sperry said. "It's unfortunate some of the other original buildings had to go. I think you have to preserve some of the heritage in higher education." He said that over the years, several alumni have stopped in to reminisce about the building.

"The good thing about Old Science Hall is that they've retained a lot of the old building," he said.

Brigitte Callay, chairperson of the department of languages and cultures, agrees.

"I believe that these older buildings are much prettier than some of the younger buildings," she said. "They're much friendlier from the outside." The department of languages and cultures moved to Old Science Hall last January. Also housed in the renovated building are departments of music, art and anthropology.

With a complete interior and exterior refit and all utility infrastructure brought up to code, the building is able to provide new services to the university while maintaining history.

"It's necessary to renovate and upgrade buildings such as Old Science Hall," said Robert Parrish, vice president for administration. "The functional use has been served by that facility. Now it's time to take that building and redirect it to a new use."

Old Science Hall stands now as a modern connection with the university's past.

New athletic scholarships honor 'famers'

Scholarships were recently established in honor of three BU alumni and Athletic Hall of Fame members — Frank Golder '31, Walter "Whitey" McCloskey '44, and Charles "Chuck" Daly '52. Each of these alumni has had noteworthy careers in their chosen field. The scholarship honors attest to the dedication, success and long records of public service of these alumni.

A brief outline of the accomplishments of these men indicates their worthiness for the honors. Frank Golder's career as an English teacher and coach at Bloomsburg High School began in 1937. In the late 1950s he entered school administration, and in 1962 he was named principal of Bloomsburg High School, a post he held until his retirement in 1972. Golder was head basketball coach for 19 seasons. His vision as an administrator helped guide the school through the turbulent era of the 1960s. Golder and his wife, Myra, live near the high school in Bloomsburg.

The Walter "Whitey" McCloskey scholarship was formally announced in April at a banquet organized by his former Danville High School players. Throughout his teaching career, McCloskey has used basketball as a means of helping young people mature into responsible adults. Compassion toward all his athletes has been a trademark. During his 22-year tenure as head coach, he never cut a player. McCloskey resides in Danville and remains active in school and community affairs.

Charles "Chuck" Daly, perhaps Bloomsburg's most widely known living alumnus, transferred to Bloomsburg State Teachers College as a sophomore from St. Bonaventure University. A leader on two BSCC basketball teams, Daly began coaching upon graduation. Following many high school and college positions, he moved into the coaching ranks of professional basketball. The capturing of the 1989 National Basketball Association championship by the Detroit Pistons has been the highlight of Daly's coaching career. His team's repeat in the 1990 NBA championships marks only the second time that feat has been accomplished since the Boston Celtics dynasty in the 1960s. Daly has just renewed his contract as the head coach of the Pistons. He lives in the Detroit area with his wife, the former Terry Cierlitsky, also a Bloomsburg graduate.

For more information about these scholarships, contact J. Andrew Cannon, assistant director of development/athletics, at 717-389-4663.

Five elected to Athletic 'Hall'

The induction of five alumni will bring the total number of members in the BU Athletic Hall of Fame to 30 when ceremonies are held on Friday, September 21. This year's event is set for 6 p.m. at 24 West, Hotel Magee's banquet facility.

This year's recipients of the university's highest athletic honor are Charles Blackburn '35 of South Williamsport, Elmer Kreiser '50 of Columbia, Stuart Marvin '78 of Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, Michael Morucci '80 of Bloomsburg, and John Willis '74 of Manville, N.J.

In addition to being honored at Friday night's affair, the new inductees will be recognized the following day during halftime of the Huskies' football game with Edinboro.

Charles Blackburn '35

Blackburn lettered for four seasons in both basketball and baseball and served as team captain in basketball in his senior year. In addition, that season the baseball team posted a perfect 12-0 mark while claiming the Pennsylvania State Teachers Colleges championship. During his four-year career as the Huskies' leftfielder, Blackburn did not commit an error.

Following his graduation, he became a teacher and spent time in several school districts before his retirement. Blackburn is best known for his outstanding efforts as a high school basketball coach although he also was a long-time licensed multi-sport official at several levels and a semi-professional baseball manager.

In 29 years of high school coaching, he built a record of 527-183. He began the varsity program at Northwest High School, coached at St. Joseph's of Williamsport where his teams won multiple titles, including a state PCIAA crown, and at Williamsport High School, where his teams won eight PIAA District Four championships and four regional titles. He also served stints at South Williamsport and Bishop Neumann high schools. Blackburn was recently inducted into the Pennsylvania Sports Hall of Fame.

Elmer Kreiser '50

Kreiser performed for some of Bloomsburg's most outstanding football teams between 1947 and 1949, including as a member of the undefeated 1948 club. He was a three-year starter at defensive end for the squad where he earned all-conference, All-Pennsylvania and Little All-American honors. Kreiser was drafted by the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League but pursued his profession as a teacher and coach.

During Kreiser's tenure with the football team, the Huskies posted a 23-3 record under legendary coach Robert Redman, a charter member of the university's Hall of Fame. Kreiser served as the squad's captain in his senior season. He also performed as a starting guard for Bloomsburg's basketball team for two seasons and went on to play for the Berwick Car Builders in the semi-professional Eastern League.

A unique aspect of Kreiser's education was that he attended Bloomsburg for 36 consecutive months and served as class president for three years. He returned to his hometown of Columbia as served as the school's head basketball coach for 11 seasons, registering an .850 winning percentage and winning seven league titles. He served as principal of Columbia High School until his retirement in 1985.

Stuart Marvin '78

Marvin was an 11-time All-American performer for the Huskies' swimming and diving unit under long-time coach Eli McLaughlin, in addition to winning several Pennsylvania Conference titles. He became the university's first triple All-American award winner in 1975 and equalled that effort with three more honors in 1977. A year later, Marvin finished among the top performers in five races to gain All-American recognition in each race which was the first time that feat had been accomplished by an NCAA Division II performer.

Throughout his career, he established and re-established several team and pool records and still holds five university records and three individual marks including the 50-yard freestyle (21.20 seconds), 100-yard freestyle (46.20 seconds), and 200-yard freestyle (1:41.90). He was also a member of the record-setting 400-yard medley and 400-yard freestyle relays in times of 3:36.50 and 3:34.84 respectively.

Following his graduation, Marvin remained involved with the sport of swimming as he has held several positions and is currently manager of the International Swimming Hall of Fame Complex and works with the City of Fort Lauderdale Parks and Recreation Department. He has served as an official at NCAA Division I championships and was nominated for appointment to the Board of Directors for the International Swimming Hall of Fame.

He returned to competitive swimming after an eight-year absence in 1986 and has since won United States Masters Swimming national championships in 11 events, established a new American record for 30-34 age group in the 50-yard freestyle (20.99 seconds) and a new American and World record for 30-34 age group in the 50-meter freestyle (24.27 seconds). Marvin has been a U.S. Masters Swimming All-American in each of the last four years.

Michael Morucci '80

Morucci is the university's all-time leading rusher after four seasons with the football team. The powerful back gained 3,536 yards in his career, which is the third-highest total ever gained by a runningback in Pennsylvania Conference. Morucci set 16 university single-game, season and career standards, 12 of which still stand. He scored 162 points in his four seasons on 27 touchdowns and both figures represent records. He also holds the conference record for most carries in a career as he rushed 785 times. Morucci also owns Bloomsburg's longest touchdown run from scrimmage as he ran 84 yards against Kutztown in 1977.

He was a Pennsylvania Conference all-star selection in each of his four years with the club and earned Little All-American honors and Kodak Coaches' All-American Honors in 1979. He was selected as the Eastern College Athletic Conference's "Player of the Year" in 1979 after leading the Pennsylvania Conference and finishing fifth in the country in rushing yardage in 1978.

The Huskies' standout performer was a seventh round draft choice of the New Orleans Saints of the National Football League but had his career cut short by an injury.

John Willis '74

Willis established multiple single-game, season and career records during his three seasons in uniform for the Huskies and is one of only four basketball players to have his number retired by the university, that honor coming on February 21, 1983. The standout center was the dominant "big" man in the Pennsylvania Conference in the early 1970s and led the Huskies to their first Pennsylvania Conference championship game appearance, an NCAA Mid-East Regional title and a berth in the national quarterfinals.

He continues to hold three school marks including points in a game as he scored 48 points against York on February 26, 1974, rebounds in a season when he pulled down 389 during the 1973-1974 campaign and career field goal percentage making 54.4 percent of his attempts from the floor. Willis is also fifth on the Huskies' all-time scoring list with 1,467 points and is one of only two players among the top 15 scorers who accomplished the feat in three seasons.

Following his graduation, Willis moved into the professional basketball ranks in Spain, spending several seasons in European competition before moving to Israel, where he performed as one of the top players in that country's professional leagues. Upon his retirement from basketball, he went into an international business field where he remains at this time.

Tickets for the banquet are still available and may be purchased by sending a check for $17 per person, payable to "BU Athletic Hall of Fame Banquet," to Jim Hollister, Sports Information Director, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

Five honored as outstanding TRIO alumni

Five BU alumni have been nominated for recognition in the 1990 "National Book of Outstanding TRIO Alumni."

TRIO is the flagship, federally funded program under which BU's Student Support Services and Upward Bound program operate. It funds other higher educational programs for low-income and minority students across the nation including Talent Search and the Ronald E. McNair Program.

Gloria Leslie, director of Student Support Services, nominated two BU alumni, and Ruth Ann Bond, director of BU's Upward Bound program, nominated three alumni of that program.

The nominees from Student Support Services are Christine Haririan, a 1989 business graduate with a concentration in finance, and Elaine McColgan, a 1989 business administration and finance graduate.

The nominees from Upward Bound are Donna Engelberger, a 1986 graduate in business administration and accounting; Dawn Greene Thren, a 1986 graduate in mass communication; and Ann Mae Weikel Smith, who did not graduate from BU but participated in the Upward Bound program from 1979-81.

Leslie says of her students, "I chose them because they were both non-traditional students with families. They struggled, but they came to a point where they were very successful. Where there's a will there's a way."

Student Support Services paves the way by recruiting low-income, first generation or differently abled students on the college level and assisting them financially and/or academically. Upward Bound targets a similar bracket of students at the high school level and helps motivate them to attend college.

Both Haririan and McColgan harbored "math phobias," but said Student Support Services not only helped them to overcome their anxieties, but also helped them in life.

"This program assisted me in meeting many challenges and instilled within me an enthusiasm for learning, not only in the world of academia where I am pursuing further education, but also in the way I live my life," McColgan said.

According to Bond, Thren, an Upward Bound alumni, shares this enthusiasm.

"She was the first in her family to attend college and to achieve a bachelor's degree," Bond said. "Her level of achievement and her professional growth are truly outstanding." Thren is the director of publications at Lebanon Valley College.

By honoring these TRIO achievements, the "National Book of Outstanding TRIO Alumni" provides positive role models for TRIO participants, Leslie said.

"It helps students in the program because they can see a success story," she said.

The book will be published in commemoration of National TRIO day, which was held Feb. 24 in Washington, DC, at the University of the District of Columbia. Selected alumni will be notified. The celebration is designed to promote TRIO programs and their philosophies.

Chuck Daly to try for third title

Chuck Daly '52, perhaps BU's best known living alumnus, has decided he will try to lead the Detroit Pistons to a third consecutive National Basketball Association championship. In accepting a new, multi-year contract, he turned aside suitors from network television and other NBA teams.

"I really don't know anything else. This is what I've always done," Daly said at a news conference.

Daly had been courted openly since the Pistons won their second consecutive NBA title in June. Among the more persistent suitors were NBC, which wanted Daly for a commentating job, and the Philadelphia 76ers and Denver Nuggets, who were seeking general managers.

Daly said he consulted with some of his players, including Isiah Thomas and Joe Dumars, and other NBA coaches before deciding to stay. He also talked with former Oakland Raiders coach John Madden, now an NFL analyst for CBS, and Raiders' managing general partner Al Davis.

"I wanted to make sure that I was capable of doing the job and could give it 110 percent because you have to do that if you're going to try to win in this league," Daly said.

Before Daly arrived in June 1983, the Pistons never had consecutive winning seasons. Under Daly, the Pistons have been better than .500 for seven straight years.

Daly, 59, holds nearly every Pistons coaching record. His regular-season record is 378-237, and his playoff mark is 62-31, including 15-5 this year.

The following article about Daly was written by Heister Bittenbender, staff writer for the Press-Enterprise, Bloomsburg.

When he played college basketball, Chuck Daly exhibited the knowledge and keen interest in the game that would make him world famous.

Daly, now celebrating his second straight NBA championship as coach of the Detroit Pistons, was a forward for the then Bloomsburg State Teachers College

Huskies under coach Harold Shelly, graduating in 1952.

Dave Linkhorst of Barnesville, who played on the same Huskies teams with Daly and graduated a year later, has many memories of those days.

Both are members of the Athletic Hall of Fame at Bloomsburg University.

"Chuck was a good player," Linkhorst said. "If he is foul conscious now (the Pistons are known as the bad boys of the NBA), he was then, too."

"We had no great players, but we had successful teams (a 12-4 record in 1951-52) and probably because we had no one guy that stood out. Chuck was a good shooter . . . those were the days of the two-hand shooter, and he was good at the two-hand set shot."

Linkhorst said Daly was a typical team player, yet one who only displayed interest in basketball and shunned the other sports.

"He was all basketball — ate, slept and drank basketball. While some of us went into other sports, he was out there playing basketball. It didn't surprise me he became successful coaching."

While he wasn't surprised that Daly would gravitate into the coaching world and do well, Linkhorst never expected how successful he would be.

"It's great. What he's done is something," Linkhorst said, and then revealed that Daly accomplished something as a coach that he had always wanted to do as a player.

"He also said he would have loved to play in Madison Square Garden," Linkhorst said. "He didn't get there as a player, but he did as a coach."

"He was not a great runner. He liked to play slow down, get the rebounds. They do that defensively at Detroit," reminded Linkhorst, who likes to think that he once preserved Daly for the world.

"There was this incident when he and (fellow player) Don Butler got into a scuffle. I got them broke up, but I sprained my ankle." He laughed, saying, "I saved his life. Butler was a tough kid."

Linkhorst said Daly stopped in to see him once on his way to greatness. Daly at the time was traveling from coaching at Punxsatawney High School to becoming freshman coach at Duke University. Linkhorst later ran into him at some coaching clinics, but said he hasn't seen him recently.

He thinks the pressures of the game may be taking their toll on Daly.

"He's not the same kind of cool person that he was as a player and earlier when he was coaching," Linkhorst said. "You can see he's not at ease during a game."

Grimes 'Loyalty Awards' for 1989

Seventy-two Bloomsburg University alumni have earned distinction as recipients of the second annual Richard "Burly" Grimes Loyalty Awards. They earned this recognition in 1989 by attending a regional alumni chapter event, by returning to campus for either Alumni Weekend or Homecoming*, and by contributing to the Alumni Annual Fund. Attending both Alumni Weekend and Homecoming can substitute for a regional alumni chapter event, since the latter are not held in all areas every year.

The award honors "Burly" Grimes, a retired teacher from Harrisburg, who has missed only one Alumni Weekend or Homecoming since he was graduated in 1949. He currently serves on the Alumni Board of Directors.

We salute the following alumni who are recipients of the 1989 Richard "Burly" Grimes Loyalty Awards:

Band alumni picnic

The 15th annual M & G Band Alumni picnic was held on July 14 at the Bloomsburg Town Park with 40 adults and 23 children attending. Those present included Eve Owens '78, Sue Lehigh '76, Kathy Dawes '77, Barb Yanek '85, Vanessa Bauer '77, Tom Gelger '77, Nelson Miller (former band director), Tim and Roxanne Dennis '81, Greg Bittler '75, Bob Hafner '80, Steve Snyder '72, Bob Schwanger '76, Larry Nester '77, Jack and Sue Davenport '72 & '75, Terry Guers '77, Carol Snyder '79, Dianna Waddell '88, Doug Post '79, George Klissinger '76, Tom Ruhl '78, Steve Galbreath '67, and Terry Oxley (current band director).

Next year's picnic will be held at the Bloomsburg Town Park on July 13.

Plans for the Alumni Band's participation in this year's Homecoming festivities on October 27 were also announced at the picnic. Rehearsal will be held at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday in the band room of the Haas Center, and the band will form at the IGA parking lot on Market Street for the 10 a.m. start of the parade. A joint practice for the university and alumni bands will be held at the Redman Stadium at 11:30 a.m. The football game begins at 1 p.m.

A buffet and get-together for alumni will be held at 4 p.m. in the band room of Haas. At 9 p.m. alumni and current band members will hold a toga party at the Bloomsburg American Legion Post Home on Old Berwick Road.

This year's coordinator of band alumni activities is George Klissinger, 520 Main St., Apt. A-6, Harleysville, PA 19438; (215) 256-4072. Or you may contact Greg Bittler, 315 W. Mahoning St., Danville, PA 17211; (717) 275-3906.

Berrigan picnic at Macungie

An alumni father-daughter pair, William Derricott '66 and Jnanne Derricott '89, attended the Berrigan Sub Picnic in Macungie on July 27. Other alumni in attendance were Dennis W. Bishop '70, Bob Bottner '59, David S. Busch '81, Mary K. Busch '81, Ellen Drexler '82, Pat Fulton '80, Tom Fulton '78, Jerry Gelger '80, Brian Hamm '82, Jne Illgar '75, Sharon Illgar '75, William D. Hobson '82, Maureen E. Hobson '82, G. Thomas Hughes III '76, Cindy Karchner '82, Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, Ronald R. Klemkosky '67, Susan Lilly '79, Dale E. Mantz '49, Terry Mazlich '80, Kevin J. Nester '49, Bnh Shelly '76, Mark Shlpman '81, Cindy Shlpman '81, Scot Smale '79, Kelly Smale '81, Terry Uhl '70, Donald H. Yeakel '69. Spouses, children and friends also attended. Special guests were Ed Alkre, member of the BU Council of Trustees, and his wife, Gratia. Representing BU were Bill Balley, manager of the University Store, and Doug Ilppenstlel '68, director of alumni affairs.

Delaware chapter meets

BU alumni living in Delaware met for dinner at the Blue Coat Inn in Dover on July 18. In attendance were Mike Adams '72, Barbara Adams '73, Gloria Boyer '62, Paul Boyer '62, Glurla Dill '48, Richard Donahue '80, Lisa Fester, Mary Anne Klemkosky '59 (past president of the Alumni Association), Ron Klemkosky '67, James Lucks, Jeanne Radcliff '85, Lois Stouffer '32, Earle Stouffer, Rhonda Viola '76, John Viola '75, and Tom Hughes '76 (president of the Alumni Association). Next year's dinner will be held on Wednesday, July 24.

Bloomsburg woman named trustee

Anna Mae Lehr of Bloomsburg has been appointed by Gov. Robert P. Casey to serve a six-year term on the BU Council of Trustees. A graduate of North Union Township H. S. in Nuremburg, Mrs. Lehr earned a bachelor's degree at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. She also attended the University of Maryland, George Washington University and Penn State.

From 1947 to 1985, Mrs. Lehr served the residents of Columbia County as Pennsylvania State University's extension home economist. Upon retiring, she became one of the firstwomen to earn the rank of senior agent — an academic honor at Penn State that is equivalent to a full professor.

Mrs. Lehr serves on the executive committee of the Columbia County United Way and on the board of directors of the Bloomsburg American Red Cross chapter. She is former president of Bloomsburg's Business and Professional Women's Club, and the Columbia County United Way board of directors and International Soroptimist Club.

Among her numerous honors for public and community service were a first place prize for a do-it-yourself program by Woman's Day magazine in 1977 and Columbia County's Outstanding Citizen Award in 1972.

She is the widow of former Columbia County Sheriff Ray E. ("Skeets") Lehr. Her son, Gregory, is a graduate student at BU.

Baird to return to faculty

John S. Baird Jr., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, has announced that he is stepping down from the position in order to retain faculty status as a member of the university's Psychology Department.

Baird began his career at BU in 1971 as a psychology professor. He was appointed by President Harry Ausprich as interim dean in the 1986-1987 academic year and received an official appointment as permanent dean in summer 1987.

Baird has decided to adhere to the terms of the faculty's collective bargaining agreement that will enable him to maintain a tenured position as a full professor on the BU faculty.

"The agreement specifies that faculty can work in a permanent appointment as a manager for a maximum of three years," Baird noted. "My three-year term is now completed, and I did not want to lose my status as a tenured professor."

Baird has agreed to serve as the interim dean into the 1990-1991 academic year while the university conducts a search for his successor.

Davis chairs trustees

LaRoy G. Davis '67 of Feasterville was elected chairperson of the BU Council of Trustees. A member of the council since January 1980, he is a secondary social studies teacher at Bensalem Township Senior High School.

He earned a master of arts degree at Trenton State College in 1972, and completed post-graduate study at Temple, Penn State and Bloomsburg universities.

Elected vice chairperson was Kevin M. O'Connor of Plains. He served on the council from 1976 to 1983 and was re-appointed in 1988. He is executive director of the Luzerne Intermediate Unit 18 in Kingston.

Gerald E. Mallinowski '63, an attorney from Mount Carmel, was elected secretary of the trustees. He was appointed to the council in 1983.

He earned his juris doctor degree at Dickinson Law School in 1967.

Vinovrski returns to BU

Bernard J. Vinovrski returned to BU as director of admissions on July 16. Since July 1986 he served as dean of admissions at Wilkes University. Prior to that he was employed at Bloomsburg from 1978 to 1986.

During those years, he served as director of admissions, associate director of admissions, and was interim assistant to former BU President James H. McCormick.

Vinovrski's first position in higher education was at Wilkes University where he was hired in 1971 as associate dean of admissions. He worked in that capacity for seven years.

He earned a bachelor's degree, a master's degree in education and a master's degree in business administration from Wilkes in 1969, 1976 and 1978, respectively.

Edwards represents alumni

C. Stuart Edwards '41 has represented alumni as an integral and committed member of the BU Foundation since the board's reactivation in December 1985. He is also a member of the Alumni Board of Directors and past president of the Alumni Association.

He held faculty and administrative positions at his alma mater from 1958 to 1979.

"I think that when your alma mater asks you to come back and work, it's a compliment," Edwards said. More importantly, he deems his service for the BU Foundation as a means to pay back the institution.

"If there were not schools like Bloomsburg, a lot of people would not have gone to college," Edwards said. As a state institution with a historically good reputation, BU is able to offer a good education at a relatively inexpensive price, he added. Like many other alumni, Edwards sought his education at BU shortly after the depression.

Through the foundation — originally established in 1970 as a non-profit education corporation that solicits gifts and grants used to assist the university in carrying out its educational missions — Edwards is able to work hard to repay his proverbial debt.

He is married to the former Eda Bessie Beilhartz '41, whom he met during his undergraduate life in Bloomsburg. She serves as the university historian.

Philadelphia Chapter holds luncheon

Attending a luncheon at the Lakeside Inn were Marle Morgan '54, Sadle Mayernick '27, Catherine Evans, Grace Miller '19, Esther Dagnell Via '34, Lucy M. Ennis '30, Margaret Minner '23, Margaret Collins and Jim Gledhill.

Retired professor starts scholarship

Dr. George Boss, one of the founders and implementers of what has become the Department of Mass Communication, recently contributed $500 seed money to a special fund. It is intended that when the fund reaches $3,000, an annual Mass Communication Scholarship will be awarded in perpetuity. It is hoped, of course, that the sum will grow to $5,000 so that a more adequate scholarship can be provided.

"Several other departments have been building scholarships," Boss noted. "Your contribution will be one way of showing your appreciation of this particular department's program and its value to you and the University curricula. Such a scholarship will be your investment in the future of other students in this dynamic field. It should help in attracting quality students to this major and its opportunities."

Checks may be made out to the BU Foundation, with your gift designated for deposit in the Mass Communication Scholarship Fund.

New faculty emeriti

Faculty emeriti status has been conferred upon four BU faculty members:

Professor William K. Decker of the Department of Music, who retired June 30 after 33 years in education, including 27 at Bloomsburg.

Professor Arlane Fourman of the Department of Languages and Cultures, who retired June 30 after 28 years in education, including 21 at Bloomsburg.

Associate Professor Jack L. Melss of the Department of Business Education/Office Administration, who retired December 31, 1989, after 23 and one-half years of service at BU.

Associate Professor James R. Whitmer, of the Department of History, who retired in 1988 after 24 years of service at BU.

In addition, Professor Richard D. Alderfer of the Department of Communication Studies will retire in January 1991. He is completing 40 years in education, including 23 at BU.

Faculty promoted

Nineteen faculty members have been promoted, effective August 11:

Promoted from associate to full professor — Leo G. Barrille, sociology and social welfare; Ronald R. Champoux, communication disorders and special education; James R. Lauffer, geography and earth science; John J. Ollvo, business education and office administration; Mehdi Razzaghi, mathematics and computer science; John H. Riley Jr., mathematics and computer science; Bruce L. Rockwood, finance and business law; Samuel B. Silke, communication disorders and special education; Anne K. Wilson, sociology and social welfare.

Promoted from assistant to associate professor — Diane H. Angelo, communication disorders and special education; Karen J. Elwell, finance and business law; Thomas S. Klinger, biological and allied health sciences; Ann L. Lee, communication disorders and special education; Sallm Quresbi, marketing and management; Dale A. Springer, geography and earth science.

Promoted from instructor to assistant professor — Thomas F. Martucci, health, physical education and athletics; Edwin P. Moses, English; David R. Rider, health, physical education and athletics; and Louise M. Stone, English.

Orchestra sponsors cruises

The BU-Community Orchestra will sponsor two vacation cruises next year in an effort to raise money for the orchestra's future summer concert tour.

A five-day, four-night "Spring Break" cruise to the isles of Nassau, Little Stirrup Cay, and Freeport, Bahamas, has been scheduled for May 25-29 aboard Royal Caribbean Cruise Line's "Nordie Empress."

An eight-day, seven-night "Fourth of July" cruise to Alaska is planned for June 30 to July 7 aboard the Holland America Line's "SS Rotterdam."

For more information, contact Dr. Mark Jelinek at 717-389-4289.

Coaches honored

Roger Sanders, head wrestling coach, and Dave Rider, women's swimming and diving coach, have been named the Pennsylvania Conference "Coach of the Year" in their respective sports. Both coaches led their squads to successful seasons including high finishes in the conference championships.

Sanders, who has been BU's head coach for 18 years, has compiled a record of 217-91-4. Rider has a four-year record of 28-15.

'Spectrum' wins awards

"Spectrum" magazine, published within the journalism program of the BU department of mass communications, received three national awards. It won second place in a national competition for two-page spreads and was third in overall design and typography in the trendmaster awards sponsored by the Associated Collegiate Press.

In the Mark of Excellence contest sponsored by the Society of Professional Journalists, "Spectrum" won second place in overall excellence.

"Spectrum" was named an All-American Magazine earlier this year by the ACP.

BU dean honored

Howard K. Macauley, dean of the College of Professional Studies at BU since 1979, has been recognized by the Association of Teacher Educators as one of 70 leaders in teacher education across the nation. He joined the faculty in 1967 as an associate professor of social foundations of education.

According to ATE officials, the status of a leading teacher educator is evidenced by outstanding teaching or supervision, significant research in education, distinguished service, professional writing or publication and/or exemplary leadership.

He earned a B.A. degree in English and social science at Bucknell University, an M.A. degree in journalistic studies at Stanford University, and an M.Ed. degree in secondary education at Temple University.

Students help Hugo victims

A group of dedicated BU students spent their spring break in March helping restore homes for the victims of Hurricane Hugo in South Carolina. Armed with hammers and trowels, the students were part of Habitat for Humanity's relief efforts.

International students visit

Fifteen of the best high school students from the Soviet Union visited the university at the end of July. The students, who ranged from 14 to 17 years of age, are considered to be among the top future leaders in the U.S.S.R. They followed a week-long itinerary that includes numerous activities arranged by the university.

Thirty students from Taiwan, ranging in age from nine to 40, also visited BU to learn English as a second language. The visit was arranged by Herman Shu, an MBA student at BU.

Former teacher-administrator dies

Kenneth C. Hoffman of Berwick, who retired as director of university relations in 1984, died May 13 after a lengthy illness. He joined the BU faculty in 1970 as a journalism instructor and director of publications.

A 1935 graduate of Penn State, he worked as sports editor of the Berwick Enterprise from 1936 to 1943. He then joined the Associated Press in New York City as a news-photo editor and later served as supervising editor for 16 years prior to retiring in 1966. He returned to Berwick as owner of the Campbell Printing Company.

He was extremely active in community and church affairs during the past 25 years.

Surviving are his wife, the former Helen Parker, to whom he was married 50 years; two children, Mrs. Jon (Kaye Louise) Lommerin and John P. Hoffman; four grandchildren and a brother.

Barker scholarships given

Bloomsburg University's faculty union have presented $350 scholarships to two non-traditional students in memory of Ellen Barker, a professor of psychology at BU from 1980 until her death earlier this year.

Both students are part-time students with perfect 4.0 grade point averages. Susanne Urlick of Paxinos is a mother of four who pursues a degree in elementary education. Susan Kozlowski of Weatherly, a mother of three, is a social welfare major.

"These two outstanding students epitomize the values of family life and educational excellence that our esteemed colleague Ellen Barker embraced," a union spokesman said.

Telecourse schedule announced

BU announces its upcoming Fall 1990 semester schedule of telecourses to be aired by public broadcasting station, WVIA-TV, and PENNARAMA, the statewide instructional cable television network:

"Art of the Western World," a general education course ("Introduction to Art," 30.101.91), will explore the many artworks from the Classical Period of Greece to the 20th century. In addition, students will be invited to campus to attend lectures, view slides of other artworks, and participate in a group tour of a prominent local art museum. These activities will be directed by Robert Koslosky, Ph.D., an associate professor in the art department.

"The American Adventure," a general education course ("United States History to 1877," 42.121.91) will emphasize social history while preserving the more traditional discussions of "great figures and important events." Students will gain a deeper understanding of the effects of political and economic events on women, children, the family, Blacks and native Americans and will view historic landmarks including Ford's Theater, New Mexico's Pueblo ruins and many other places. Ken Millen-Penn, assistant professor of history, will lead the class.

"Discovering Psychology," a general education course ("General Psychology," 48.101.91) looks at important issues such as aging, situational considerations and the relationship of health to mind and behavior. Video programs, narrated by Philip Zimbardo, will lead students through discussions about how the brain works, how children develop and how we live our lives from birth to death. The class will be conducted by Calvin Walker, Ed.D., chairperson of the department of psychology.

New baseball coach named

Matt Haney, who has been a member of the BU athletic staff for the past two years, has been named head baseball coach, succeeding John Babb, who retired after six seasons in charge of the program. Haney will take over the program in September, directing the team through its fall exhibition schedule in preparation for the spring campaign.

Haney has served as one of Babb's assistant coaches for the past two years in which the club posted consecutive second-place showings in the Pennsylvania Conference Eastern Division. In addition, the 42-year-old native of Warminster has been an assistant coach in the university's highly successful women's basketball program.

"I am really looking forward to building on the success we enjoyed over the past few seasons," said Haney. "Our goal is to finish on top of the Eastern Division and reach the conference playoffs again. I think with 18 letter-winners, including seven starters, that is very realistic."

Brasch authors ninth book

Walter M. Brasch, Ph.D., professor of journalism, is the author of Forerunners of Revolution, published in August. This is his ninth book. Others include Black English and the Mass Media and Cartoon Monickers: An Insight into Animation History.

The Press and the State, with Dr. Dana Ulloth, was cited by Choice magazine, published by the American Library Association, as "Outstanding Academic Book" in 1988.

Newspaper wins prize

BU's student newspaper, The Voice, has won a second national newspaper award for journalistic excellence — its fourth national prize in three years. The latest award by the Society of Collegiate Journalists was a third place in overall excellence.

The paper received a first place award from the American Scholastic Press Association in 1987, and two writing awards for its 1988 issues.

English major Dawn D'Aries of Pottstown was editor in chief for the paper's 1989 issues.

John Maittlen-Harris, assistant professor in the department of mass communications and advisor to the newspaper, said the award was great recognition for students who spent tremendous time and effort producing the paper during the year.

BU to receive funds for ramps, elevator

The university will receive $1.5 million in state funding to install ramps and special doors for the handicapped and to initiate an elevator accessibility project for Carver Hall.

The announcement was made by Gov. Robert P. Casey, who also approved $14.5 million for capital improvement projects at state-owned universities throughout Pennsylvania.

"The State System of Higher Education will be even better equipped to serve more and more of the young people of our Commonwealth," Casey said. "These capital improvement projects include vital improvements to existing buildings and a series of renovations to make our campuses more accessible to handicapped students."

Casey said the commitment is the "latest installment in a three-year, $74 million capital investment in our State System of Higher Education." He added that it's part of an "unprecedented program" to make a college degree more affordable and more accessible to the state's young people.

Judges convene at BU

Judges from the Pennsylvania Superior Court conducted a judicial conference at BU in April. The two-day program, sponsored by BU and the Columbia-Montour Bar Association, featured actual judicial case hearings, panel discussions, lectures and other events.

Administrator promoted

Jennie Carpenter, who has been on the BU staff since 1968, has been promoted to assistant vice president for student life. She had been director of residence life since 1976, and had been in charge of the complete housing operation since 1982.

Former staff member dies

Eleanor P. Shamis, a staff member of the university's research office for 13 years prior to her retirement, died recently at her home in Bloomsburg. She was 61.

A graduate of Edwinstown High School, she attended York Junior College.

She is survived by her mother, Mary Kasper Swedo; her husband, George E. Shamis, to whom she was married 43 years; two sons, George T. and Matthew; two daughters, Joan Trotter and Diane Shamis; six grandchildren, a brother and a sister.

PCAA re-elects officers

The Pennsylvania Council of Alumni Associations

News from BU

(PCAA), of which BU is a member, recently elected officers at the council's 1990 annual conference held at the Holiday Inn in Clarion.

Re-elected president was Janice W. Etshled of Camp Hill, a 1950 graduate of West Chester. A former teacher, she has been a member of the West Chester Alumni Board of Directors since 1951. Active in PCAA since the 1950s, she served as treasurer from 1960 until her election as president in 1989.

John Dankosky, a 1967 graduate of California State College, was elected to a second term as vice president. A resident of New Cumberland, he is executive director of the Pennsylvania Business Roundtable.

Serving a second term as secretary is Irene D. Heaps, a 1950 graduate of Kutztown. She is the retired director of the Hershey Public Library.

Mae L. Sobczak, a 1960 graduate of Shippensburg, was re-elected treasurer. She was president of Shippensburg's Alumni Association for 1988-1989 and is a former board member of the Shippensburg University Foundation. She is vice president/treasurer for Ernest E. Latsha, Inc., Harrisburg.

PCAA consists of representatives from the alumni associations of the 14 State System of Higher Education universities. The council promotes awareness of the State System needs and accomplishments to the General Assembly, the 14 alumni associations and the general public. The council also promotes alumni accomplishments and contributions to the Commonwealth and the nation.

The State System has over 357,000 alumni. Of these, three out of four — more than 259,000 — live in Pennsylvania. The SSHE comprises 14 universities located throughout the Commonwealth, with 690 buildings on over 4,000 acres of land. SSHE universities enroll more than 96,000 students, 86 percent of whom are Pennsylvania residents. With over 10,500 employees, the State System is the 18th largest employer in the state.

BU wins two national awards

Bloomsburg University has won two national awards in the 1990 Recognition Program of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). The university was recognized for its efforts at the 1990 CASE annual meeting held in July in Chicago.

Sheryl R. Bryson, the former director of university relations and communication at BU, submitted a total of seven entries into the contest.

Bloomsburg won a bronze award (third place) in the Public Relations Program Improvement category from a total of 29 entries. The university also won a silver award (second place) out of 141 entries in the Special Institutional Events category for the "Environmental Symposium in Celebration of the Sesquicentennial" program.

The bronze program improvement award recognizes significant improvement in the overall public relations program or in specific public relations projects, comparing programs or projects from the 1986-1987 year with 1989-1990 activities. An evaluation was made of the improvement over a three-year period rather than overall program excellence.

The special event, "Global Change and Our Endangered Environment: From Planet Earth to Pennsylvania," was held October 16 and 17, 1989. This category recognizes events designed to recognize special occasions such as institutional anniversaries, inaugurations, galas, convocations and others.

President's contract extended

The professional contract of President Harry Ausprich has been extended to 1993 by the Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education. This followed unanimous endorsement by the BU Council of Trustees.

Act 188 requires that trustees of SSHE universities conduct an annual review of presidential leadership at their designated institution. This year's process at BU was guided by the Trustee Review Committee which included Gerald Mallnowski of Mount Carmel, Ramona Alley of Berwick, Richard Wesner of Danville, and Stanley Rakowsky of Clearfield.

Assisting in the review process this year were six constituency representatives from the university, including

Veto Talanca, president of BU's American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) chapter; Dr. Oliver Larml, president of BU's chapter of the Association of Pennsylvania State College and University Faculties (APSCUF); M. Ruhul Amin, chair of the University Forum; Jane Gittler, chair of the BU Foundation; Anne O'Brien, president of the Community Government Association; and Mary Anne Klemkosky, president of the Alumni Association.

John Dorin honored

John Dorin, a member of the BU Foundation Board of Directors and former chairperson of the BU Council of Trustees, was the 1989 recipient of The Sunday GRIT's Meritorious Community Service Award. He was recognized for his service to Montoursville, where he is in his ninth year as mayor, and for service beyond.

In addition to his time, Dorin has declined to accept the mayor's annual salary of $4,000, thus contributing $32,000 to his community. He is also extremely involved in all kinds of community and church organizations.

He is purchasing manager at GTE Products Corp., Circuit Products Division, in Williamsport, where he has been employed for 26 years. He served a six-year term on the BU Council of Trustees. Three children — James, Cynthia and Michelle — are BU alumni. He and his wife, Ann Marie, have been married for 29 years.

"If it wasn't for my family, I wouldn't be able to do the things I've done," he noted. "I feel that family life and church are very important to an individual. You must have that support to provide service to your community and to be a good citizen. So, it's all the people who work with me — their contributions along with mine — that help us solve problems and continue to work for the betterment of our community."

Playground equipment donated

Paul Rushin, owner of the McDonald's franchise in Berwick, has donated some $7,000 worth of playground equipment to the Campus Child Center at BU.

According to Rushin, McDonald's is undergoing some renovations to modernize his fast food restaurant, and it no longer will have room for the playground equipment.

"Our restaurant is presently being remodeled to maintain a modern decor," said Rushin, who is a longtime friend of BU's Campus Child Center having previously taken part in playground fundraising endeavors and providing coloring books and refreshments to the children. "They are great kids, and I think they will get a lot of use from this equipment."

The equipment — a carousel, jumping horses, a sliding board and a fiberglass train — is eight years old, said Rushin, but it is safe, durable and has been refurbished since first installed at the Berwick restaurant.

Judy Coleman-Brinich, director of the Campus Child Center, said the playground equipment is a welcome addition to her center.

"The playground equipment from McDonald's is a great addition to our center," Coleman-Brinich said. "The children will now have a variety of equipment to play on and enjoy."

The equipment was transported from Berwick to the BU campus, Jan 29, by members of the university's maintenance department personnel who are currently in the process of installing it inside the center.

BU's Campus Child Center is located in the basement of Elwell Residence Hall.

MSN accreditation received

The University's master of science in nursing program has received full initial accreditation by the National League of Nursing, according to Dr. Lauretta Pierce, chairperson of the department of nursing.

Retirements announced

Six faculty members have announced their retirements:

Gladys Ancrum, professor of nursing, will retire August 24 after 13 years in education, including six at BU.

Richard J. Donald, assistant professor in the department of curriculum and foundations, retired December 31, 1989, after 33 years of teaching, including 21 and a half years at BU.

Charles G. Jackson, professor of political science, will retire August 24 after 33 years of teaching, including 30 years at BU.

Thelma L. Lohr, instructor in the nursing department, will retire May 18, after nine years in education, including five at BU.

Robert R. MacMurray, associate professor of economics, retired December 31, 1989, after 31 years in education, including 17 at BU.

Thaddeus Plotrowski, director of the Learning Resources Center, will retire September 1, after 35 years in education, including 30 at BU.

Husky Club plays important role in athletics

This column will be an ongoing informational digest authored alternately by Mary Gardner, BU's director of athletics, and Andy Cannon, assistant director of development/athletics and executive director of the Husky Club. The two areas these authors oversee are directly related but have much different focuses. It is hoped that the information supplied in this column will give you a sense of what is happening in Huskies' athletics and in the Husky Club.

By J. ANDREW CANNON

As my first year as executive director of the Husky Club draws to a close, it is a good time to reflect on events of the past year and to look to the future. The goals of the Husky Club to raise additional funds, create more involvement in and awareness of BU athletics, and to continue to grow in size and volunteerism, have also become even more important to the success of the Huskies in intercollegiate competition.

First, a look at some occurrences of the past year.

A change in the Husky Club auction was one major adjustment made to improve the income from one of our regular fundraisers. The format of the auction was modified from a live auction with many single items into an event which was both social and fun. This change transformed the auction into an evening of dinner, dancing and a silent auction. There were fewer auction items, but the items were generally of greater value or several related items were packaged together to entice bidders.

The dinner-dance, which attracted a good crowd, was a double success: Every one had a great time, and the silent auction netted over $7,100 for the General Scholarship Fund. Next year we hope to increase the net proceeds by offering even more auction items. The dinner-dance and auction adds a social event to the Husky Club calendar, making a fun wrap-up to the academic year.

The golf outing was a fun event attracting 60 golfers for a foursome scramble at Berwick Golf Club. This year's outing had a special hole-in-one prize. Towne Marine offered a $15,000 powerboat and trailer by purchasing the insurance policy for an ace on the par 18th hole. Each of the other par threes had its own prize for a golfer's ultimate thrill. Unfortunately, no golfer had enough skill or a lucky bounce on that day. Still, each par three had a closest-to-the-pin prize, one hole had a most accurate drive prize, and another hole offered a longest drive prize. After the day's golf round, a chip-off was held on the putting green. The event was capped by a buffet dinner during which the awards were given out. The day was a critical success.

An adjustment in the golf outing, which would allow a larger fundraising total, is being investigated. One potential solution would be to move to two separate tournaments. Possibly included in this plan would be a spring tournament early in the golfing year. This would be a low cost, high volume tournament. The second tournament would be added in late summer and be similar to the present outing in format. This second event might be combined with an early pre-season football scrimmage in the morning, a barbecue lunch and a golfing afternoon.

In addition to these events, several other ideas have moved from the planning stage to the fundraising stage.

An initiative has been undertaken to assist the General Athletic Scholarship Fund. This campaign, called the Athletic Scholarship Campaign (ASC), is designed to involve local businesses in the drive to increase available scholarship funds. The campaign began in the late spring and is continuing through the summer.

The emphasis is placed on recognizing the donors to the campaign in the football game program; on the MessageCenter — the computer-generated visual display in the Nelson Fieldhouse; and over the public address system in the Redman Stadium and the Nelson Fieldhouse. The ASC is envisioned as an ongoing and increasing source of funds for athletic scholarships.

Three new named scholarships have been announced, honoring former BU student-athletes who have made significant contributions to society after leaving the university. These inspirational alumni — also members of the BU Athletic Hall of Fame — are Frank Golder '31, Walter "Whitey" McCloskey '44 and Charles "Chuck" Daly '52. (See accompanying article.) Fundraising campaigns will continue through the fall and winter to raise funds for these scholarships.

Several other initiatives are being investigated, including a golf-putting booth at the Bloomsburg Fair. This fundraising idea was given a trial run at the one-day Renaissance street fair in downtown Bloomsburg and worked well.

Another potential fundraiser is a crafts fair over a two-day period in Nelson Fieldhouse or another campus facility. A firm which creates, organizes and operates fairs of this nature has offered to assist in this event. At present, the university's calendar of events and availability of campus facilities are being checked to find a suitable date. It may not be possible to schedule this event until 1991.

As always, new ideas are welcome. Also, I am receptive to innovative and creative thoughts for increasing both the number and amount of funds contributed to the Husky Club and athletic scholarships. If you are interested in finding out more about the ways you can help the Husky Club, please contact me. The Husky Club can make good use of your expertise, as well as your contributions. Volunteers, organizers, workers and brainstormers will all make the Husky Club more successful.

SENIOR SEND-OFF — The annual Senior Send-off Picnic, sponsored by the Alumni Association, was held on the last Sunday of April. Among those helping to prepare the picnic fare were (from left) board member Helen Cimbala '35, Husky Ambassadors Stuart McAleer and Mark Schiffer, and Alumni President Tom Hughes '76.

Benches, carillon honor memory of Louise and Marco Mitrani

Two redwood, gull-winged benches were recently installed at the main entrance to the Haas Center for the Arts in memory of Louise and Marco Mitrani. Earlier this spring student recipients of the Mitrani scholarships decided to present a gift to the university that would be a tangible expression of their gratitude for the good they had received. Several students approached the BU Foundation and asked for assistance with the project by purchasing one of the two benches. The Foundation readily agreed.

At the dedication, May 2, two graduating seniors, Deborah Bentz and Michelle Seibert, offered remarks on behalf of the other 45 Mitrani scholarship recipients presently on campus. Norman Belmonte, president and chief executive officer of Milco Industries, Inc., and nephew of the Mitrani's, also spoke.

"We wanted to create a memorial to the Mitrani's that would say 'thank you' for giving us the chance to experience higher education, to discover our talents and to develop them to their fullest potential," said Bentz. "Conservation of the environment was important to the Mitrani's and to us. We believed the benches would provide everyone the opportunity to more fully enjoy the beauty of our campus. By placing the benches in front of Mitrani Hall, we were also able to recognize their commitment to the arts."

"The Mitrani scholarship was a major factor in my decision to attend Bloomsburg—it made college affordable for me," Seibert said. "Later, I decided against transferring because I had come to appreciate and enjoy the Celebrity Artist Series, the Bloomsburg Theatre Ensemble, and other aspects of the University and town that the Mitrani's made possible. We can all be thankful for the things the Mitrani's gave us."

In addition to the benches, all BU students, through the Community Government Association, joined with the alumni association, the Foundation, and the university to place a carillon system in Carver tower in Mrs. Mitrani's memory.

The Mitrani's firmly believed in the value of higher education and were particularly willing to invest in Bloomsburg University and its students. Through their generosity, the scholarships were established, Mitrani Hall was refurbished, and the Celebrity Artist Series was launched. Mrs. Mitrani was a member of the Foundation board until her death in 1989.

Sesquicentennial Obiter on sale

Copies of the Sesquicentennial edition of the Obiter are available for $30, including postage, according to Melissa Harris, editor.

Members of the Class of 1989 who did not receive their free copy of the Obiter should call the Alumni Office (1-800-526-0254).

Husky Ambassadors appointed for 1990-1991

Twenty-two students have been appointed by President Ausprich to serve as Husky Ambassadors for the 1990-1991 academic year. Named after a competitive selection process, the Ambassadors promote the interests and goals of the university from a student's perspective by serving as a liaison between the student body, faculty and staff, and alumni.

President Ausprich, in announcing the appointments, said the members of the Husky Ambassadors represent the best qualities of the student body at Bloomsburg University.

The following students were appointed:

Timothy Brooks of Tunkhannock R.D. 3, a junior majoring in criminal justice;

Patrick J. Bryan of Nanticoke, a senior majoring in marine biology;

Carolyn A. Butcher of Plymouth, a senior majoring in psychology;

Michelle Creola of Mechanicsburg, a junior majoring in mathematics;

Jenette Delmonico of Mechanicsburg, a junior majoring in psychology;

Peter Despres of Hackettstown, N.J., a senior majoring in computer and information science;

Kyle Fetterolf of Ashland, of junior majoring in medical technology;

Gary Groenhelm of Towson, Md., a junior majoring in management;

Jody Heckman of Enola, a junior majoring in management;

Sharon Johnson of Philadelphia, a sophomore majoring in psychology;

Amy Kravetz of Walnutport, a sophomore majoring in management;

Lisa Markel of New Cumberland, a senior majoring in special education;

Stuart McAleer of Berwyn, a junior majoring in marketing;

Robert D. Naples of Parkesburg, a senior majoring in marketing;

Brian Ralph of Skaneateles, N.Y., a junior majoring in accounting;

Mark Schlffer of Trevoze, a junior majoring in accounting;

Anne Shannon of Leola, a sophomore majoring in mass communications;

Shannnn Strasbaugh of Gettysburg, a sophomore majoring in political science;

Sharon Siegrist of Ronks, a junior majoring in psychology;

Robln Traenkle of Bensalem, a senior majoring in elementary education;

Ken Wolff of North Wales, a junior majoring in interpreter training;

Nichole Woodson of Harrisburg, a senior majoring in marketing.

The Ambassadors sponsor or assist with a number of projects, including Homecoming, Alumni Weekend, corporate visits by students, campus visitations by prospective students, regional alumni chapter events, and the Senior Send-off Picnic.

Seniors pledge $35,000 in 'Give Five' program

For the first time in the history of the school, a senior class has made a commitment prior to graduation to support the university. "I believe I can speak for the members of my class in saying that we felt this was the most appropriate time to show our commitment to the university and The Trust for Generations campaign" said Jim Shevlin, president of the Class of 1990. Forty-three percent of those seniors contacted pledged to the program.

"Give Five" is the vehicle designed to address the financial situation of the graduating student. Senior class members were asked to pledge a gift of $100 over a five-year period. One year after graduation, seniors will make their first payment of $10 gift to Bloomsburg University—$5 supports the Annual Fund, and $5 supports a class scholarship. The following four years, class members pledged to increase their gift by $5 annually.

"We hope that this gift will set the standard for future classes to follow," Shevlin said. "The 'Give Five' program gives our class the opportunity to do something we would not be able to do alone. At the end of the five-year pledge period, the Class of 1990 will have funded an endowed scholarship enabling us to offer our own scholarship to selected students. I personally want to thank my classmates for their involvement in this effort."

President Harry Ausprich praised the class for their contribution. "This gift (which will be counted at part of Phase II of The Trust for Generations campaign) is deeply appreciated," Ausprich said. "The motivation to help make things happen at the university even after leaving is the cement that keeps this university strong. We have a strong university family. Our alumni, both young and old, are devoted to what has been created here."

"As I look back over the last five years, I am pleased to see that our university programs are better than ever," said Ausprich. "This is because of people, people like our graduating seniors, who care deeply and show this with their financial support of our students, our facilities, and our faculty."

Student project links local manufacturers

Three undergraduate students from the department of mathematics and computer science at the university are involved in developing a process that will implement a state-of-the-art technological advancement for small manufacturing industries in the Bloomsburg region.

In December history was made when students electronically transmitted a computer-generated "blueprint," or graphic design, of a local manufacturer's machined part to another area industry via computers and a telephone line. The two industries, Girton Manufacturing of Millville and Columbia Precision Machining of Berwick, have operations in northeastern Pennsylvania.

Students Rich Kessler, R. Mark Moore and Sam Forker worked with a draftsman at Girton — manufacturers of industrial washers for the pharmaceutical trade — to produce the machined part's blueprint. They programmed a Macintosh computer to transmit the blueprint to a receiving IBM computer at Columbia, a "job shop" that makes machined parts for a variety of industries. This transfer of engineering data was used by Columbia to manufacture the part for Girton.

THE PROCEDURE WENT LIKE THIS: After the blueprint was electronically transmitted from Girton, the IBM computer at Columbia automatically converted the job specifications into a numerical control code. The code was then relayed to a computer-controlled torch cutter that, in turn, manufactured or "cut out" the part.

The process is called CAD/CAM telecommunications, and according to Paul Hartung, professor in the department of mathematics and computer science, the Girton-Columbia project was the first such attempt at electronic telecommunications in the United States involving small manufacturing industries.

"I am not aware of any colleges or universities who are developing CAD/CAM telecommunications with industries in this region," said Hartung. "In fact, it's safe to say that Bloomsburg University is the only institution providing this kind of service to smaller industries anywhere across the country."

The Girton-Columbia project was funded in part by a grant from the Ben Franklin Partnership Program which provides partnerships between Pennsylvania's higher education institutions, industries and government agencies using technology to improve employment in the state.

Hartung, who oversaw the Girton-Columbia project and arranges off-campus learning experiences for his BU students, said machine-to-machine — or in this case, computer-to-computer — telecommunications has become a high-priority issue within the manufacturing industry.

"One of our clients (another Bloomsburg area manufacturer) that produces parts for IBM printers was told they must become involved in electronic telecommunications, or they will no longer be able to do business with IBM," said Hartung. "Since IBM is their primary customer, the company is forced to oblige or risk the possibility of going out of business."

HARTUNG SAYS CAD/CAM electronic telecommunications should not be confused with the operations of facsimile or FAX machines.

"This is not FAX," Hartung said. "FAX machines send a bitmap. This CAD/CAM communication sends it all. When a document is sent by FAX, the receiver would have to retype or redraw the job specs on his or her computer . . . a procedure that isn't necessary with CAD/CAM."

Hartung says CAD/CAM enables the sender to transmit a computer text file that is ready for printing or editing directly to the receiver.

"In transferring blueprints from one company to another, accuracy is of the utmost importance," said Hartung. "CAD/CAM's method of transmission preserves all accuracy. It ensures the receiver of getting all the detailed information he or she needs to do the job."

CAD stands for "computer assisted drafting," said Hartung, and he defines CAM as "computer assisted manufacturing." The two acronyms are often spoken together as if they had the same meaning, but he says they are not the same.

"Computer assisted drafting is the making of blueprints and consists of highly technical specifications," Hartung said. "Computer assisted manufacturing (CAM) is a computer's controlling of the tool path in a cutting operation specified by the CAD blueprints."

Before CAD/CAM was developed, blueprints were designed on paper by a draftsman. After completing the blueprint, the draftsman mailed his document to the manufacturer who had to redraw the entire graphic and calculate the tool path by hand. Today, with the emergence of personal desktop computers, that process has become obsolete.

"Ten years ago," said Hartung, "CAD/CAM electronic telecommunications was available only in expensive minicomputers and mainframes costing more than $200,000. Today the computer and the software can both be purchased for under $10,000."

THERE ARE A FEW GLITCHES in CAD/CAM that create difficulties for senders and receivers using computer-to-computer telecommunications, Hartung said.

"The proliferations of desktop computers, both Macintosh and PCs, and the different CAD and CAM systems (that have been designed for different makes of computers) have made this the technological Tower of Babel," said Hartung.

"CAD and CAM are rapidly growing areas for desktop computers, and this has created a 'hotbed' for entrepreneurs. The computer languages and applications, however, are so different from one computer to the next. At present, there is no standard computer language used to write the programs."

Despite these technical problems, Hartung and the students are planning similar transmissions with a dozen regional industries in 1990.

"We have scheduled a large number of transmissions during the next year," said Hartung. "There are 12 companies in all — from Allentown to Towanda — who have indicated their interest in CAD/CAM telecommunications and want our help."

He added that BU is in a unique position to implement CAD/CAM telecommunications between Bloomsburg area industries and manufacturers in Europe and Asia. The project is being explored by administrators from the university's department of mathematics and computer science and Institute for Comparative International Management Studies.

Hartung also discussed the advantages of CAD/CAM telecommunications with Chinese industry officials when they visited the university this summer.

'Trust for Generations' advances toward goal

"As of July 1, the university has received $789,000 in gifts and pledges toward the $1 million goal for phase II, The Scholarship Fund, and more than $655,000 toward the $1.5 million goal for phase III, The Academic Excellence Fund," said Anthony Ianiero, assistant vice president for development.

Phase II, The Scholarship Fund, is $211,000 from its $1 million goal. Contributions to this phase of the campaign will support approximately 100 additional scholarships yearly, an increase of 25% in the number of university scholarships offered. Because many families are finding it difficult to afford the cost of a college, scholarships are becoming increasingly important to university students. Nearly 75% of the students find it necessary to work to pay for tuition, room, and board. Scholarships lessen the financial burden on both parents and students, and make it possible for Bloomsburg University to attract academically strong students who otherwise would be unable to afford a college education.

The third phase, The Academic Excellence Fund, will help assure that Bloomsburg University students and faculty have uncompromised academic resources which are equipped with the latest technologies and services. Completion of this phase will bring Bloomsburg University closer to having the kind of facility urgently needed to prepare students to enter the work force of the future. Nearly $845,000 is needed to complete the $1.5 million goal.

This fall, more than 15,000 alumni will be asked to support The Trust for Generations campaign. Alumni will have the option of giving to either The Scholarship Fund or The Academic Excellence Fund. Parents of current students will also be contacted in the fall.

Questions concerning the campaign or campaign gifts may be directed to the Development Office at (717) 389-4128.

Bloomsburg University alumni pledged a record $130,224 to the 1990 Annual Fund phonathon campaign, exceeding the $125,000 phonathon goal.

"We are very pleased with this outcome. BU alumni once again are investing in the ongoing support of university activities and programs," said Anthony M. Ianiero, assistant vice president for development. "The alumni recognize the importance of a college education and are willing to help today's students fulfill their educational goals."

The 1990 goal for alumni giving was set at $305,000. Alumni gifts to The Trust for Generations and to the Husky Club, which is part of the Annual Fund, are also included in the alumni goal. The Annual Fund represents a portion of the 1990 $1.1 million goal set by the Development Office.

During the eight-week period from Feb. 25 through April 25, nearly 9,500 calls were completed to alumni. Forty-eight percent (4,590) of the alumni contacted either pledged to the campaign or indicated they were considering making a gift.

The phonathon was staffed by 36 student callers and was supervised by Susan R. Hicks, assistant director of development. Domino's Pizza provided refreshments for the students the final two evenings.

Hazing daze

As freshmen adjust to college life at Bloomsburg University in the fall, they do it with the support of a host of services designed to ease that adjustment and without the formal harrassment of earlier days. It has been several years now (back to the 60's) since newcomers underwent freshmen hazing. And over the years it eased gradually from what it had been.

About fifty years ago hazing was at its peak. And if freshmen thought it made college more difficult they were reminded by the upperclass students that neglect of "freshmen customs" would result in an even more difficult adjustment. Those starting college in Bloomsburg in 1932 faced the following:

Men

Freshmen had to turn coats, and button them, inside out.

Trousers had to be rolled up to their knees.

They were also required to wear a large sign - 8x12 on which the name and hometown of the student appeared.

Dinks, black socks, black ties and black garters were a must.

Before entering buildings, freshmen had to get on their knees, touch their forehead to the ground and say "Allah."

After Sept. 27, the size of the card was reduced to 4x6.

Handbooks were to be carried at all times.

No freshman was excused from "sheering practice."

Freshmen had to address all members of the faculty and upperclassmen as "sir".

Politeness and courtesy were mandatory.

Grass and senior walkways were strictly prohibited.

Knickers and high or prep school insignias were taboo.

At no time could a freshman's hand be inside his jacket pocket.

Freshmen could not accompany nor speak to girls except in the company of upperclassmen.

Freshmen were allowed to smoke only corn cob pipes.

Freshmen were required to learn three verses of the Alma Mater and sing them uncovered at the first game.

Freshmen were not allowed to adorn their faces with any growth of hair.

They were always responsible for filling milk and water glasses in the dining room.

All phone calls were answered by freshmen.

Must pass a college information test.

Women

All freshmen were to have their books tied together with green ribbon at least one inch in width while carrying them to and from class.

Freshmen had to carry umbrellas to class. If it should rain that day, they carried them on the next sunny day.

Freshmen arranged their hair in thirteen braids.

Freshmen wore white hse stockings.

Freshmen also wore on their backs signs 12x8 inches on which were lettered Frosh - and the hometown.

Freshmen could use no cosmetics.

Freshmen could not wear jewelry, execept watches.

Freshmen had to say "Hello" to all upperclass women, and "How-do-you-do" to the faculty.

Freshmen could not talk to men except in the company of upper class women.

Like the men, they were required to keep off the grass.

Freshmen had to carry the Handbook at all times.

Freshmen wore maroon and gold armbands on campus and in Bloomsburg.

Freshmen gave faculty women and upperclass women preference at all times.

Fur trim and safe milk

College life in Bloomsburg is, of course, more than that which officially emanates from Bloomsburg University - courses, organizations, sponsored activities, etc. It is also off-campus living, visiting commercial haunts of one sort or another, parties, interacting with townspeople, etc.

Reflecting some of this are the advertisements that appear in The Voice. Today advertisements are placed by local, regional, and nationwide businesses and organizations of varied interests. A half-century ago the Maroon and Gold (name of the student newspaper up to several years ago) carried ads as well, but they were all local and focused on immediate consumer needs.

The following information from ads were taken from two Maroon and Gold issues of the 1929-30 academic year and reveal something of the economy at that time and what merchants thought appealed to students:

Barton T. Pursel, a clothier, advertised men's suits, overcoats, and topcoats, and ladies' dresses and coats ("no extracharge for fur trim") for $1.00 while men's pants went for $.50. Another store, Lustig's, advertised itself as the Two-Pants' Suit Shop and sold clothes "For Men and Future Men." Shear and Sharping sold Endicott-Johnson shoes starting at $2.96 and offered a Special Prize for Football Men." Students were "well cared for" tonsorially at Row's Barber Shop where five barbers held forth. Noting that "College Girls Appreciate Good Clothes," the Marietta Dress Shop invited co-eds to visit.

Several places, including one called Candyland, advertised ice cream (ice cream "parlors" were popular) and candies while the old Columbia Theatre (now home of the Bloomsburg Theatre Ensemble) assured students that it was the "Talking Picture Headquarters." The Capitol Theatre countered by claiming to be the "Home of the Talkies." Snyder Dairy sought to entice students with "Safe Milk" and invited them to visit the plant and discover "why Snyder's Milk Tastes So Good and Is So Healthful."

J.J. Newberry served "a Delicious Hot Lunch everyday for the Special Price of 25 cents" while apparently a cut above that was "Bush's New Feature," a "Student and Business Men's Lunch" for 35 cents. Texas offered a no-nonsense "Quick Lunch."

Students grew their own

Courses come and go and some remain but follow a roller coaster popularity pattern over the years. It has been a long time since agriculture was offered at BU, but apparently it was popular in the early part of this century.

Agriculture was taught to seniors as a full year course in the Biology department with Professor D.S. Hartline playing a large part. The course was intended to better prepare students to teach agriculture in the public schools. It consisted of 100 forty-five minute periods and was mandated for certain students.

The students, the majority of whom were women, were responsible in the spring for selecting a crop, ordering the seeds, plants and other supplies, and recording expenditures. In order to prepare for that phase, students used the dormant months for studying different crops, pests, agricultural techniques, and the marketplace. Among other materials, Federal Department of Agriculture bulletins were studied. Visits to local farms also were instructive.

The highlight of the course was the actual farming each spring. Each student was given a twenty by thirty foot plot in an area of twenty acres set aside, probably on land that now is occupied by Sutliff Hall, Centennial Gymnasium, and the parking lot. In the first year (1913) corn, wheat, potatoes, sunflowers, tobacco, peanuts, and violets were planted. Beekeeping was also attempted.

The major problem with the course was that mother nature did not adjust her ways to correspond to the school year. As a result school employees had to take care of the crops in the summer and the subsequent class would harvest and market them, at a profit, they hoped, in the fall. In 1914, one thousand violets were for sale at fifty cents a hundred.

Visit to Soviet Union lays groundwork

By JOHN S. MULKA '66

Dean of Student Development

Never in my wildest dreams did I ever consider traveling to the Soviet Union. As a youngster growing up during the Cold War and remembering Khrushchev pounding the table with his shoe at a United Nations meeting and recalling his infamous threat, "We will bury you," I probably repressed any conscious notion of being able to fly 4,669 miles from New York to Moscow. However, a dream of visiting eastern Europe became a reality as three colleagues and I traveled to Moscow and Pushchino from April 29 to May 6.

During this time, our efforts led to the signing of a statement of understanding which focuses on the possibility of faculty and student exchange programs; mutual research projects between Soviet and Bloomsburg University faculty; and possible cultural exchange programs, including art exhibits and student performing groups.

ST. BASIL'S, or Pokrovsky Cathedral, built in 1561.

The genesis of this trip actually started when Bloomsburg University served as host to seven students and a counselor from the Soviet Union last summer. Without any advance notice, Dr. Felix Rizvanov, the counselor who accompanied the Soviet students last summer, arrived in Bloomsburg a few days before Christmas and presented an invitation to designated university officials to be the guests of the U.S.S.R.'s Academy of Sciences.

The invited officials included Dr. Harry Ausprich, president; Dr. Harold "Hank" Bailey, director of BU's Institute for Interactive Technology; Dr. James Parsons, associate professor of biological and allied health sciences and director of international education; and me. The invitation, among other things, requested Dr. Bailey to present interactive video demonstrations.

AFTER SEVERAL MONTHS of trying to find a mutual period of time when it was convenient to meet with our Soviet counterparts, we departed JFK on Saturday, April 29, for a week's sojourn in the Soviet Union. We learned very quickly (in less than 24 hours) about the virtue of patience. For, you see, our trip was almost negated by a three-hour traffic delay caused by construction on the George Washington Bridge. If it were not for a cooperative and friendly porter who knew the ropes and literally rushed our computer equipment through customs, the plane may have left without us and certainly without our computer equipment. How would we have explained that to the folks back home?

Then, after a rather pleasant, non-stop Pan Am flight to Moscow of some eight and one-half hours, we spent the next seven hours in the airport. Four hours were spent moving slowly (very slowly) through customs, and nearly an additional hour was spent waiting for a table in the airport's restaurant despite the fact that there were tables available. This was our first sign of the slow but steady pace of life in the Soviet Union. As one Soviet worker told us later on our trip, "We work for such little wages that we return in effort what we are paid."

Believe it or not, the time spent at the airport might have been longer if it were not for the "behind the scenes" efforts of Dr. Rizvanov. It was also, in part, enjoyable, especially when we finally did get through customs as we were greeted by Margarita, who was one of the seven Soviet students at Bloomsburg University last summer. She lives in Moscow and opted to give up a three-day holiday vacation with her family to share time with us. Her unselfishness and kindness, as well as Dr. Rizvanov's, were reflective of all the friendly Soviet people we would eventually meet throughout our visit.

While dining in the airport's picturesque restaurant overlooking the runway, our hosts treated us to a bountiful feast of caviar, smoked sturgeon and steak. The slow but courteous service in the restaurant gave us an opportunity to reacquaint our friendship with Felix and Margarita and to review our plans for the week. Incidentally, the international airport itself in Moscow is only about twice the size of the Harrisburg or Scranton airport.

Upon leaving the restaurant, we discovered our driver had moved the van in which we had left our suitcases. It took us another half-hour or so to locate our van. The driver thought he was doing us a favor by moving the van closer to the terminal.

THE DRIVE TO PUSHCHINO, a community of over 20,000 where we would be staying for the next five days, took about an hour and a half. It is located approximately 70 miles south of Moscow. Enroute to Pushchino, I was struck by several sights. The first was a highway that circles Moscow. It has only one line painted in the middle but is used as a six-lane highway. Since most Soviets do not own cars, this apparently does not seem to present a major problem for motorists.

Then there were huge rectangular flats or apartments, that were built adjacent to each other and seemed to run together for miles as we were passing them along our way to Pushchino. In designated plots were small gardens, which were used by the people to grow their vegetables. Seeing the men and women till the soil with shovels and pitch forks makes one appreciate the rototillers that are used here in the USA.

Moving into the country we were impressed by the beautiful forests dotted with an abundance of white birch trees. Intermittently, we would pass communal farms where people live in small villages in tiny homes, which looked like summer cabins with tin roofs. Relative poverty or a primitive existence for a large majority of the people appeared to be the rule, rather than the exception.

My first evening ended with Felix taking me to a bathhouse with a sauna and an artesian pool that had moss growing on the floor and around the perimeter. The gracious hospitality that I received from the men in the bathhouse made me feel welcome, and a massage by the masseur helped to relax my tired and aching muscles. Although I had not really slept for over 35 hours, I felt refreshed after the hour spent in the bathhouse.

Upon returning to the hotel lobby, one of the women at the registration desk made a point to inform me that of all the foreigners who stay as guests at the hotel, she felt the Americans were the friendliest. That was good to hear before retiring for the evening.

MONDAY, APRIL 30

Why did we visit Pushchino? Our host, Dr. Rizvanov, is a physicist and serves as the head of the environmental technology program at the Institute of Soil Sciences and Photosynthesis in Pushchino.

Pushchino is basically a biological research community consisting of various institutes including, among other disciplines, computer science, mathematics and languages. The institute falls under the jurisdiction of the USSR's Academy of Sciences. There are a total of 17 institutes throughout the U.S.S.R. The young students, who reside in the community, are often brought to the various institutes for demonstrations and lectures.

While Dr. Rizvanov was on our campus a year ago, he and his students met Dr. Bailey and were given a

The Soviets have nothing like it. Consequently, Dr. Rizvanov wanted to show his colleagues the capabilities of such a program and invited Dr. Bailey to demonstrate and lecture.

Following breakfast at the hotel, we were greeted by Professor Valentin Kefeli, director of the Institute of Soil Sciences and Photosynthesis, and Dr. Rizvanov's boss. We walked from our hotel to the institute, some three or four blocks away on sidewalks that were unpaved. We congregated in the spacious and well-kept headquarters of Professor Kefeli where we met a half dozen members of his staff. The institute itself is housed in a rather well-maintained facility. The building abounds with various themes of art collections from around the globe, including pieces of sculpture and icons, the latter of which are located behind locked louver doors.

PROFESSOR KEFELI (right) and President Ausprich after signing statement of understanding between BU and the Institute of Soil Sciences and Photosynthesis.

Professor Kefeli proceeded to inform us about the purposes and programs of his institute. President Ausprich then described the mission of Bloomsburg University. Each of us followed by stating our primary job responsibilities and commenting on the kinds of exchange programs we could envision for the future. Dr. Bailey gave his first of many demonstrations of interactive technology, which appeared to set the stage for the balance of time spent in Pushchino.

After being given a tour of the institute, Professor Kefeli hosted a luncheon for us in one of several rooms in his office complex. It was interesting to note that at this point in the meeting the women staff were excluded from this "private" luncheon, which was when we discussed the elements of a suggested statement of understanding. We ended the luncheon by having a brandy toast to encourage the fruition of our proposal.

Later that afternoon, we were given a tour of the surroundings of Pushchino. We first went to a national bison reserve where American and European bison are being raised. We were told that during World War II Hitler's troops killed most of the buffalo in eastern Europe. The buffalo at the reserve were being bred and then taken to locations where they once roamed in their natural habitat. Marina, a young Ph.D. zoologist whose father is the foremost bison authority in the U.S.S.R., lectured continuously for an hour and a half on the biological and environmental differences between American and European bison. We certainly didn't expect to visit a bison reserve on our Soviet excursion!

Our next sightseeing stop was in the 14th century city of Serpukhov. It is an industrial city of 140,000 and would be considered a depressed area in comparison to our standards. Unpaved sidewalks, water being carried in buckets to homes, remnants of a wall that was built around the city, and an elderly population were among some of the distinguishing features of this community. Three architecturally magnificent Russian Orthodox churches and a monastery were the principal sights of this city. Since only one of the churches was open for worship, we took advantage of the opportunity to observe the service for about a half-hour. Interestingly, the other churches and the monastery were padlocked, but all had scaffolding erected as restoration of older buildings in this part of Soviet Union, including Moscow, seemed to reflect a priority of perestroika. My response to the scaffolding around these churches in Serpukhov, as well as others we had seen, leads me to believe that the doors to freedom of worship will become fully opened in the not-too-distant future in the U.S.S.R.

TUESDAY, MAY 1

This is May Day in the U.S.S.R. and is part of a three-day holiday. You probably recall seeing the demonstrations in Red Square on your television sets that day.

We traveled an hour and a half by bus to Moscow and went to Olga's flat for dinner. Olga was another counselor who accompanied Felix and the Soviet students to America last summer. President Ausprich and I had met her at Villanova University before she and her group of students departed for Hugh O'Brien's International Leadership Conference at Johns Hopkins University.

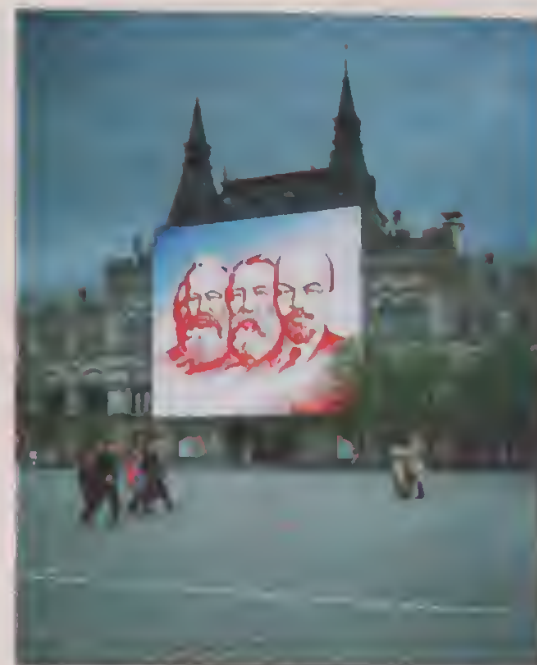

We enjoyed a lovely reunion with Olga, her daughter, Irene, and their friends that afternoon. Olga will be bringing 15 Soviet students to Bloomsburg University this summer as part of Hugh O'Brien's U.S.A.-U.S.S.R. Exchange Program. During our visit with Olga and her friends, we discussed, among other things, the itinerary for the cultural exchange program at Bloomsburg University, which took place from July 27 to August 4.

Margarita and Rasa, a Lithuanian student who was part of the Soviet delegation at Bloomsburg University last summer, joined us for sightseeing in Moscow. I would like to point out that Rasa took a 12-hour train ride to Moscow to be with us for the balance of the week. It was such a pleasant and heartwarming surprise seeing Rasa because I never imagined her being able to visit us due to the political differences existing between the U.S.S.R. and Lithuania.

Following dinner, we took their spectacular subway to Red Square where huge painted signs of "liberty & freedom" were mounted on the sides of buildings. Although we missed the May Day demonstrations, we did see scores of policemen stationed throughout this historic site. Our tour of Red Square, however, was cut short as a quick-moving thunder storm hastened us to seek shelter.

We returned to the subway where we were again impressed by the abundance and quality of their sculpture, mosaic art in the skylights and their huge and ornate chandeliers. Their subways are immaculate and devoid of any graffiti. Younger, more sophisticated people strolling throughout the five-level subway system, up and down escalators, and scurrying on and off the trains was in great contrast to the slower pace of the older people in Serpukhov.

After the rain stopped, we walked down Gorky Street to Gorky Square, and, yes, we saw McDonald's with very long lines. Since we were running behind schedule and had to catch an 8 p.m. bus to Pushchino, Olga made arrangements with an owner of a car to drive us to the bus station. Near the bus station, however, our driver was stopped by a policeman for speeding. Felix gave the driver some rubles to pay his fine. We found ourselves running to catch the bus. This day in Moscow was ending similarly stressful to the way it began as we were stuck on an elevator in Olga's flat for nearly a half hour. Overall, it proved to be a very enjoyable day, thanks to the warmth and friendly hospitality of Olga, Felix, and their wonderful friends, coupled with Rasa's surprise visit and seeing Margarita for the second time.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 2

This was the last of the three-day holiday celebration for the Soviets. Because the institute at Pushchino was closed, another sightseeing day was planned for us.

The weather unfortunately was not cooperative as we experienced a cold, blustery day. We went to the estate of a famous Russian artist, Vdopenov. This picturesque rural setting overlooking the Oka River in the Pushchino region also served as the site where Tolstoy and Chekhov did much of their writing.

Although the artist's estate is owned by the Soviet government, his grandson's family is allowed to vacation and spend their free time there. The estate consists of several cottages, a Russian Orthodox chapel, a cemetery where Vdopenov and his family are buried, and a residence

Luther Peck '37 of Stony Brook, Long Island, N.Y., has given more than 6,500 hours of volunteer time to the University Hospital in that community since it opened 10 years ago. In a newspaper article about him, Lou said that growing up on a farm in Pennsylvania formed the roots of a discipline which have led him to value the days he spends helping others.

After receiving a degree in education at Bloomsburg, he gravitated toward work in the food business in the early 1940s. Married in 1940, he moved with his wife to New York. In 1962 he was widowed with three teenage children. Three years later he married his second wife, Claire, who had two children.

After a year of disability retirement spent in Arizona, he and his wife returned to New York in 1976. In January of 1981, 11 months after University Hospital opened, he found his way there to volunteer his services. He was assigned to the pharmacy and has been there ever since, except for an 18-month stint in the operating room.

The hospital's oldest volunteer at age 75, Lou said he has thoroughly enjoyed the first 10 years of his volunteer work and is shooting for another decade of service.

Representative: Mary Lou Fenstermaker John, 928 Country Club Dr., Bloomsburg, PA 17815. (717) 784-0434.

Our 45th-Year Reunion is history; those of us who could come had a great time at the rededication of Old Science Hall with all its recent renovations (remember those creaky wooden floors, and the lecture rooms in the back? — and now there's an elevator!), at the lunch in McCormick Human Services Center and at the elegant dinner at 24 West, the new banquet room at Hotel Magee.

Although most of us are now retired, Class President Arlene Superko is still working. We were glad to see her, as well as other '45ers: Marge Downing Cosgrove, Betty Zehner Deltrich, Julia Welliver Driskell, Mary Flaherty Kohrher, Cleo Kinney Pasa, and Alice Zehner Vergarl (who lived at the Fenstermaker house while she was completing her four-year degree!). Those from other classes were Wanda Farnsworth Langdon '44, Jackie Shaffer Creasy '46, Ginny King Marchakitta '46, Betty Smith Linn '46, and Betty Fisher '48.

We hope to see a lot more of you here in 1955, and we'd like to invite all the graduates from the 1940s: 1940 to 1949. How about it? Start contacting all your friends from any of those years, so we can have a great get-together in 1995. Since Alumni Day is usually the last Saturday in April, get your mini-reunion gangs together and be thinking about a trip to Bloomsburg in the spring of that year. Our local planning group (Julia, Mary and I) will welcome any suggestions: We'll plan for times and places for informal visiting as well as the reunion dinner(s). Keep in touch!

Harold Hartley Jr. '52, Ph.D., has retired as professor of speech pathology and audiology at Clarion University, where he has been on the faculty since 1963. His professional involvement extended beyond the university to the community, but he considers himself first and foremost, "a teacher."

While at Clarion, his research was published in the major professional journals, and he made numerous presentations of research at state and national professional conventions. These contributions were recognized in April when he was awarded the Honors of the Pennsylvania Speech-Language and Hearing Association during its annual convention. The award is one of the highest awards given by the association and was awarded to Hartley in recognition of his outstanding service to PSHA and the American Speech and Hearing Association, and his outstanding contributions to the field of speech pathology and audiology in the areas of research, teaching and community service.

He was also awarded the Distinguished Faculty Award by the CU Alumni Association in 1987.

A native of Lenoxville, he received a B.S. degree in elementary education with a minor in clinical speech and hearing. He received his M.Ed. from Penn State University in that field, with a minor in psychology. His Ph.D. in audiology with a minor in speech pathology was earned at Kent State University.

After a stint in the U.S. Army, Hartley served as a speech and hearing clinician for the Mercer County Crippled Children's Society and speech and hearing clinician for the Sharon Public Schools. He joined Clarion in 1963 as an associate professor and coordinator of speech pathology and audiology in the new special education department.

KENTUCKY-TENNESSEE CHAPTER — While many alumni were on campus for Alumni Weekend, some were enjoying a get-together at the Holiday Inn in Brentwood, Tennessee. Organized by Deborah Tirjan '75, the group had such a good time they've already decided meet again next year on the last weekend in April in Knoxville. Alumni in attendance were (front, from left) Lynne McCormick Matrisian '75, Deborah Roth Tirjan '75, Ann Biltsimer Case '83, Raline Mastruzzo Center '77; (second row) Jamie Sochovka '82, Bob Bird '47, Brian Case '83, Edmund Ronco '78 and Jim Gustave '58. If you are interested in the activities of this group, contact Deborah at Rt. 4, Box 61A, Lafayette, TN 37083.

"I was only going to be at Clarion for three years and then move to another university," said Hartley. "But the teaching environment has been excellent at Clarion."

Hartley commented on two changes in the speech and hearing program at Clarion over the past 27 years. "When I started here, 10 percent of the graduates went into private practice while 90 percent went to the public schools," he said. "Now those figures are nearly reversed. It reflects a broadening of services in the field and the need for growth and diversification."

"In 1963, Clarion did not offer speech and hearing services. Now, in 1990, we have a modern, well-equipped clinic offering a full range of services to the students and the community."

During his 27 years at Clarion, Hartley has served as president of the Faculty Association and of the Faculty Senate, and has served on numerous committees. He was actively involved with the Pennsylvania Speech and Hearing Association and the American Speech and Hearing Association.

In the community, Hartley has been involved for the past 14 years with Hearing Conservation Associates of Franklin, a firm studying noise induced hearing loss in industries through testing and surveys.

One of Hartley's final goals was to gain accreditation for Clarion's graduate program in speech pathology and audiology. He has worked on that for several years. He reports that a positive reaction to the proposal was received, and accreditation could be granted in the next several months.

Hartley expressed no specific plans for his retirement: "It will provide me an opportunity to do all the things I was not able to do while I was working. It will give me a freedom of schedule."

Hartley and his wife, Carolyn, live in Rockland Township. They have three children, Harold III, a chaplain at Emory and Henry College in Emory, Va.; Carol of Rochester, Minn.; and David, a staff sergeant with the Special Forces at Ft. Lewis, Washington.

Edwin R. Simpson '52 died in July at age 64. He had been an associate professor of speech and audiology at Clarion University. He retired in January 1988. Survivors include his wife, Daphne, a son and a daughter.

Lewis C. Attardo '72, director of the Ben Franklin Technology Center at the Pennsylvania State University campus in Harrisburg, attended a conference in Trieste, Italy, in early June, where he addressed an international audience of business and public officials on "Entrepreneurial Support Policies in the U.S." The conference was a first step in developing a program devoted to the promotion of entrepreneurship in Central and Eastern Europe.

On June 30 he returned to Europe to participate in another international seminar in Paris directed toward representatives of the "European Economies in Transition." The primary purpose of these seminars is to help the new emerging democracies move from "planned economies" to market economies.

"To say the least, this is an exciting time in Europe, and I am most honored to be able to contribute," Attardo said.

As director of the Ben Franklin Technology Center since 1984, he is responsible for the administration of the Ben Franklin Partnership Program in the South Central Region of the state. The partnership is an economic development initiative sponsored by the state, private businesses and academic institutions to promote technology development.

Since its inception in 1983, the program has invested over $155 million of state funds which has leveraged over $500 million from non-state sources, to fund over 1,400 projects involving the research and development of new products and processes, entrepreneurial development services and scientific education and technology training programs.

Attardo is also a private consultant and provides professional services to small and medium size businesses and economic development organizations in areas such as strategic planning, venture financing, proposal writing, marketing and management. In addition, he has been an instructor and seminar leader for business groups, economic development organizations and academic institutions in the U.S., Canada and Europe.

He serves as an officer and board member for a number of organizations and private companies. His biography has been included in Marquis Who's Who of Emerging Leaders in America, Who's Who in Finance and Industry, and Who's Who in the World.

to a 17-11 (overall), 9-5 (NECC third place) season.

He had served as an assistant basketball coach at Pierce for four years before taking over the head coaching reins at the end of the 1988-1989 season. During those four years, he played a key role in the Ravens' 65-56 mark, two NAIA District 5 championships and two trips to the NAIA national tournament in Kansas City.

He was a former coach at Kams City and Kutztown High Schools, where he amassed a 180-92 record and one district title.

Ken Marquis '73 is the owner of Marquis Art and Frame and Creative Printing Services, Inc., both located in downtown Wilkes-Barre.

A New York native who moved to Dallas in 1966, he opened the Marquis Art and Frame in 1978 in a small shop in the third block of South Main Street. In 1984, with no room to grow, Marquis moved one block closer to Public Square, to his current location in the 23,000-square foot former American Auto Store.

Today, Marquis Art and Frame employs 35 full-time workers, produces 80,000 picture frames each year, boasts the largest art gallery in Northeastern Pennsylvania, and supplies wholesale materials to 400 picture-framing shops throughout Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey.

He opened Creative Printing Services, Inc., on January 15, 1990.

He has bucked the tide of closing stores in downtown Wilkes-Barre, and he has urged city leaders to seek the help of experts in reversing this decline before it's too late.

Mary Louise O'Neill '73, R.N. has retired as in-service director at Ashland State General Hospital. In 1952, she worked in the medical-surgical department at the Good Samaritan Hospital and became an assistant clinical instructor in pediatrics, head nurse and night supervisor at the Bellevue Hospital, N.Y. Jon Shade '74 is an elementary science teacher in Millville. An astronomy unit taught last year by him has gained national notice, thanks to an article in the March issue of Instructor magazine, a well known educational journal. His program, Catch a Falling Star, provides the lead anecdote in "Four-Star Science Teachers," an article by Robert Burroughs, in which innovative science units are described. Jon's astronomy work last year was funded by a $650 grant from The American Chemical Society which fostered special astronomy activities that involved parents and sixth graders. He held stargazing parties for the sixth grade families, encouraged them to create their own constellations and to develop personal mythologies to explain them. The class then worked together to assemble an imaginary sky filled with Millville's own constellations.

Special feature of Homecoming Weekend

Brush up on teamwork, leadership skills

Shirley stood on top of a four-foot vertical log with her back to more than a dozen of her DuPont colleagues. The group on the ground, lined in two single rows — arms outstretched to form a safety net — shouted words of encouragement and support.

"We're ready, Shirley! You can do it!"

After several apprehensive glances back to her colleagues, Shirley took a few deep breaths and finally plunged backwards into their arms. Everyone cheered for the group's success — including Shirley.

This kind of trust building and teamwork is typical of a Corporate Institute training session, and according to BU's QUEST Director Roy Smith, more of corporate America needs to brush up on its teamwork, leadership and communication skills.

COMBINING HIS OUTDOORS EXPERTISE with the fundamental elements of BU's QUEST program — an outdoor adventure and education program — Smith established the institute, as a curriculum designed to develop effective corporate organizations through outdoor activity.

"You have to get people out of the corporate work place, get them in casual clothes and put them in a relaxed, informal setting," Smith said.

Once relaxed, Smith and the institute staff members — made up of both QUEST employees and outside employees — plan half-day or one-day sessions that involve activities such as mountaineering or rock climbing or group-oriented initiative tests. These sessions are intended to illuminate the potential problems that exist within a staff. The most common weak spots are communication gaps and tensions between genders, he said.

"We use them (the sessions) as a window to determine how corporate managers deal with one another," Smith said. "It's like holding up a mirror to see what needs to be worked on."

After working through a series of progressively difficult activities, the groups critique themselves. This method of evaluation is referred to as "processing," Smith said. From this discussion, the group learns how to incorporate the necessary changes into a corporate setting.

"It's the little things that make a difference," Smith said. "Great ideas can come from any corner . . . the program is of tremendous value." The institute encourages group members to speak up and make suggestions. Everyone counts during an institute session, but often the hierarchy of power within a business office leaves some employees unrecognized.

"What corporate America has really come to grips with is that to be productive and to utilize the full potential of someone, you've got to empower that person," Smith said. "You've got to give that person some trust and control."

The institute is used as a means to encourage this effective interaction, and so far its services have been noted as successful, according to Smith.

"We're trying to improve our team, improve communication and trust between teams," John Hallabuk, manufacturing operator with DuPont in Towanda, said. "You can break down a lot of barriers in the natural environment — like status. We'll go back to the workplace), and the barriers won't be there anymore."

During a recent training session, the DuPont team also faced the challenging task of getting over a beam of wood, suspended between two trees, about eight feet in the air. Two people sat on top of the beam and helped team members over one by one.

"We learn to share our problems and anxieties . . . to work as a team," Robyn Chilson, a DuPont research specialist, said. After a morning of rigorous tasks, another DuPont employee noted that he came away feeling more confident that this workers would be there for him throughout challenging work situations.

THE INSTITUTE, which helps businesses nationally as well as locally, has its headquarters at BU. After only a year, the program has served approximately six clients including well-known corporations such as Frito Lay, Procter & Gamble and Air Products.

Communication Disorders alumni invited to reception

A Homecoming reception for all alumni of the Communication Disorders curriculum will be held after the parade on Homecoming Day, October 27, in the clinic room in Navy Hall.

Please try to attend if possible; we look forward to seeing you there.

Most of the clients in Northeastern Pennsylvania are progressive and dynamic, Smith said. Public utilities and educational institutions have been a little less receptive to programs like the Corporate Institute, he said. However, the president's cabinet at BU has planned a session for the first week in October.

"Corporate America is very shrewd," Smith said. "They only spend money where it's effective."

Smith attributes the institute's effectiveness to the world's changing economy and its subsequent high demand for initiative, enterprise and innovation in management.

"Corporations are more sophisticated now. They are aware that this is a global community," Smith said. The late 1980s and early 1990s have spawned stiff competition between Japanese and American businesses, and the pressure has highlighted American weaknesses, he said.

"America has great managerial skills . . . they're good at charts," Smith said. "They're not good at communicating and teamwork. The Japanese are good at this."

THE PROGRAM'S SUCCESS also benefits the university. Although the Corporate Institute is separate from QUEST — which is part of the BU Student Life division — some of its profits filter into QUEST.

The cost per person for a five-hour training session is $75, and $150 for a one-day session. The ideal training group consists of 10 people, Smith said.

Most people are willing to pay the price — not just in Bloomsburg but in other cities across the nation. Penn State runs a more comprehensive program called the Executive Institute. The idea is popular and older than most people realize.

It all stems from Outward Bound, which originated in England in the 1940s, Smith said. Smith helped spearhead the successful Outward Bound movement when it came to Colorado during the 1960s and 1970s. In 1987, he formed the Wilderness Forum in Colorado to meet corporate needs. He moved to Bloomsburg the next year.

A native of England, Smith lived in East and Central Africa for many years. Despite his vast experiences — having travelled from the Arctic to Ethiopia — Smith sees Bloomsburg as a key location. He said he enjoys the benefits of a small town with access to more urban areas.

Smith is spending the summer here in Bloomsburg working with QUEST and the Corporate Institute.

Session offered to alumni at special discount rate

Corporate Institute Director Roy Smith extends an invitation to Bloomsburg University alumni to participate in a five-hour team building session, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Friday, October 26 — the day before Homecoming 1990.

This session will be similar to one of many training opportunities provided by the Corporate Institute to businesses and industry in the North East. Alumni who are owners or directors of companies, managers, and particularly those involved in management development — or anyone interested in improving their communication and team building skills — would benefit from the training session.

Cost for participation is $50, a savings of $25 from the regular price. Check with your employer to see if this training program is reimbursable.

YEARBOOK DILEMMA: For some inexplicable reason, not everyone in the Class of 1985 received a yearbook. Nor are there any yearbooks left over. We're trying to provide a happy ending for those class members who didn't get their yearbooks. If you received a 1985 yearbook by mistake, or if you received two copies, please contact the Alumni Office. Or if you are a two-yearbook family, would you consider donating one of them to a classmate who doesn't have one? Thanks.

Pam Howley '85, an electronic news gathering editor for ABC News in New York City, was featured in a column by Michelle Solomon in The Scranton Times newspaper. Excerpts of the article follow:

"As one of the editors for ABC World News Tonight, she's seen a lot of things most 27-year-olds have yet to experience.

"Watching all the news footage does, at times, get pretty depressing. I have to digest it and tuck it away. It's difficult to look at news all day. But ABC is teaching me a lot," Pam said in a telephone interview from her mid-town Manhattan apartment.

"Pam got interested in television and video production while at Bloomsburg University. A 1985 graduate of the school, she majored in mass communications while minoring in theater arts.

"While at Bloomsburg, she acted as a video photographer for Geisinger Medical Center in Danville, where she taped a series of business lectures for the hospital. She also was co-producer of the Easter Seals Society telethon and coordinated all the video activities during the 10-hour event. Various jobs at local news stations, WBRE and WOFL, after graduation led Pam to the realization that it was video production that she loved.

"I never had the desire to be in front of the camera. I really wouldn't want to be an on-air personality. I don't want all the glory. I'll settle for personal satisfaction," she confessed.

"After moving to Colorado, Pam landed a job at ABC News in its Denver bureau.

"I just moved out to Boulder because I had friends there, and I wanted to experience a different part of the country while I was young. I sent out resumes everywhere — local news stations, production companies." Although it took five months, she was notified that she had landed a job at ABC's Denver bureau. Pam said it was her persistence that finally paid off.

"At ABC News in Denver, Pam worked for two years doing everything from archiving and filing tapes to performing technical maintenance and solving problems.

"At the Denver bureau I would gather information for a 10-state region from North Dakota to New Mexico," Pam explained. "We would feed the news to New York and Washington and other ABC affiliates, and they had the option to use it on their news stations.

"We covered the Yellowstone National Park fire, and the farm drought was big."

"Pam explained that local and network news stations were reporting on these disasters and needed footage provided to them since they couldn't travel the distance to get the video tapes themselves.

"That's your function as a technical coordinator," she said. "You're in charge of seeing that the transmissions go through and that the videotape is edited and filed," Pam explained.

"Now at ABC News in New York, Pam is an ABC News ENG editor for World News Tonight, where she does research and searches videotapes for information that will eventually be used in the evening's broadcast. Out of 50 editors at ABC News, Pam said only 10 of them are female.

"In the editing field, there are not a lot of women," she admitted.

"Pam began applying for the job at the New York headquarters last October, but she didn't start working there until April.

"She admits to working 13 hours almost every day. "Right now I have to earn my wings. The editors that are doing the really important stuff are seasoned. I'm doing the layman's work, but it's an incredible educational experience."

"Someday Pam would like to get away from the business of hard news and eventually work for the lighter side of television. "Maybe the Children's Television Workshop. I was a TV kid, too. I'm eager to see how the Sesame Street generation comes out. And what is being done with children's programming is really exciting. Children are our future, and with television as a tool to educate children, I think that can help."

"In the present, though, Pam is concentrating on learning all she can at one of the nation's top television news networks.

"It's been a long, scary haul, but I think I've almost made it."

Soviet Union

which has now been converted into his museum. With the exception of a new log house under construction, all of the buildings, we were told by a young descendant of Vdopenov, were designed by the artist himself.

In my opinion, Vdopenov's works are comparable to the Wyeth's in our country. In fact, half of his paintings can be found in the United States, mainly in Williamsburg and in New York City. His grandson informed us that his wish in life is to have a major Vdopenov exhibit, in either Moscow or New York, where his entire collection of some 60 to 70 paintings can be shown.

From the estate we traveled to the main headquarters of the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Russia for a tour and a vegetarian lunch. The young seminarian, who gave us a tour of the most modern facility we had seen in the Moscow-Pushchino region, reported that the number of Adventists in the Soviet Union has doubled every ten years since its inception there around the turn of the 20th century. He stated further that there are presently 500 Adventist prayer homes in the Soviet Union. Interestingly, when asked why he became an Adventist, he replied, "My parents were registered members of the Communist Party. I was an engineer and was unhappy. This religion brought happiness to my life."

While we were at the Adventist headquarters, we met Norm Tarter from Idaho, who was there with his wife teaching the Meitlander method of growing vegetables to 41 students. Although I am not familiar with this particular method, I learned that one of its objectives is to maximize the yield of crops by growing them naturally in greenhouses without the effects of environmental pollutants, such as acid rain and pesticides.

A reception was fashioned for us that evening at the institute in Pushchino. Twelve high school students, some of whom will be coming to Bloomsburg this summer, participated in a program consisting of poetry reading in English, piano selections featuring Chopin, native folk songs played on a mandolin, and the singing of such favorite American songs as "Tea for Two" and "Autumn Leaves."

The mothers and grandmothers of these children baked cookies and pastries or "sweets" as our Russian friends called them. As we were munching on these goodies and sipping tea, we spoke to the young people about expectations when they come to America and Bloomsburg University this summer.

Dr. Bailey then presented his interactive video demonstration on AIDS to the 12 students. We learned that sex education is not part of the curriculum in the schools there. When glancing at the attentive students, it was obvious that their eyes were glued to the TV monitor.

That evening I wrote in my diary, "I am so impressed with the way these young students can converse in English, how musically talented they are, and how much they want to learn about the U.S." Moreover, as my colleague Dr. Bailey noted in his diary, "Natasha and the children presented a program consisting of reading poetry and playing music to us. Brought tears to my eyes. Soviet children beautiful, eager but stymied by their government. They had tremendous presence about them to perform so well for us."

THURSDAY, MAY 3

We are winding down our sojourn in Pushchino. Felix has planned a very busy day for us, most of which revolved around Hank Bailey's lectures and demonstrations.

The meetings and presentations included the chairperson of the soil science department, the director of computer sciences and two of his associates, the head of the Institute of Mathematics, a number of microbiologists, a physicist conducting research on the effects of radiation on human cells, and a scientist studying the effects of acupuncture by treating patients with microwaves rather than needles. A general meeting of all faculty at the various institutes in Pushchino was also convened at 2 p.m. for a demonstration by Hank, and the lecture hall of some 50 seats was oversubscribed. It was interesting to observe that the 12 students who attended last evening's program returned to hear Hank's presentation and some even brought their friends. Needless to say, they were impressed.

We also found time during that day to tour the local 240-bed hospital, which had over 100 doctors and over 200 nurses employed, a hookstore, a clothing store with mostly empty shelves (except for an assortment of black and brown wool knee socks for women), and a post office where we waited in line for stamps for 30 minutes. We walked by outdoor food stands, each of which sold single items of vegetables including potatoes, beets, and cucumbers (no visible signs of meat). While Hank was presenting his afternoon demonstration, a concert at the institute was being held simultaneously. The program consisted of a baritone, soprano, accordion player, and two professional acrobats. I am pleased to report that Hank's presentation attracted as many participants as the concert.

All of these activities occurred between 9 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. with only a break for lunch. At 7 p.m., the Institute of Soil Sciences and Photosynthesis called a town meeting during which the Bloomsburg University delegation presented a forum on Bloomsburg University and our observations of some of the major differences in our two societies. It was attended mostly by the same high school students who had been engaged in our programs at the institute, a few of their parents, and some of the institute's faculty members. Following a lively two-hour discussion and question and answer session, we returned to the Hotel Pushchino's restaurant where we were treated to a concluding banquet.

Professor Kefeli, Felix, our four interpreters/tour guides, and the heads of the institute's soil science department and the international education program joined us for dinner and a farewell party. Everyone took a turn proposing champagne toast. We ended this emotional celebration by our Soviet friends leading us in the singing of "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" and "We Shall Overcome."

FRIDAY, MAY 4

The signing of a statement of understanding, which focuses primarily on student and faculty exchange programs between Bloomsburg University and the Institute of Soil Sciences and Photosynthesis, occurred early that morning by President Ausprich and Professor Kefeli. We thought that we had previously toured all of the institute's facilities, but there was one that Professor Kefeli had been saving for us on our departure day to Moscow. It was a bomb shelter that had been converted recently to rooms designed for literary and political discussion. The sense that the "cold war" between our countries was over prompted Kefeli, as he commented, "to make better and practical use of the shelter for his comrades at the institute."

When we returned to Kefeli's office, we were greeted by

Professor Eugene Golovlev, who is the Academy of Science's director of the Center for Biological Research and an elected member of the Party Congress. Kefeli wanted a member of his staff with some political clout to become familiar with Dr. Bailey's interactive video program. So Hank went to work again in presenting a brief demonstration.

The balance of the morning, however, was spent discussing political changes in the Soviet Union with Professor Golovlev. He is a Gorbachev supporter who believes change should occur slowly and methodically. Our friend Felix, on the other hand, is at the opposite end of the political spectrum and believes significant changes can occur within the next five years. We found ourselves in a lively debate between Golovlev and Rizvanov, which was eventually toned down by Kefeli.

When I asked Folk Deputy Golovlev, as he is called, about the Soviet people becoming restless and perhaps causing a revolution because of their perception that "nothing is happening," he replied after a slight pause, "No, I do not fear a revolution because the Communist system over the last 70 years has taught our people to become patient."

We concluded our session with Professors Kefeli and Golovlev and returned to the hotel's restaurant where we were met by Galena, Marina, Natasha and Nadezhda (our four wonderful interpreters and guides) who simply could not have been any more gracious and kind. They presented each of us with gifts as we bid our emotional good-byes.

We arrived in Moscow at 6 p.m. and had made plans earlier in the week to meet Olga, Margarita and Rasa at the famous Moscow Circus. The performance started at 7 p.m., so we had only one hour to register at the Academician Hotel, which is owned and operated by the U.S.S.R.'s Academy of Sciences, and to meet our friends at the circus. When we arrived, we were met with yet another surprise. Michael and Natasha, who also were at Bloomsburg PRESIDENT AUSPRICH with Soviet students who were at BU last summer: Margarita, Michael, Natasha and Rasa.

University last summer, had flown over two hours from Magnitogorsk in the Ural Mountains to Moscow to be with us for the weekend. We found out that they received my letter only yesterday (May 3) informing them of our planned visit to Pushchino and Moscow.

Yes, this was still another heartwarming and emotional moment on our trip. As Natasha told me a day later, "When I first saw you walking to the circus arena, I became flustered and forgot my English words." By the way, Natasha is planning to study English at a Russian university next fall. After our busy schedule the past two days, the Moscow Circus was exactly what the doctor would have prescribed for relaxation, laughs and enjoyment.

SATURDAY, MAY 5

The four BU-connected students met us at the hotel as we departed for the beautiful and highly-revered campus of Moscow State University. We had a very important meeting scheduled with Dr. Dmitri Kavtaradze, who is the head ecologist in the U.S.S.R., and his colleagues. We spent the morning and early afternoon comparing educational delivery systems, learning about "gaming" and simulation theory in the U.S.S.R., and demonstrating interactive video. They were so impressed with Hank's program that he will be invited to attend an International Ecology and Education Conference in Moscow next May. The groundwork for collaborative efforts between Moscow State University and Bloomsburg University were also begun.

We wanted a change from our Soviet diet so we made arrangements with Olga and Felix to have lunch in a Chinese restaurant. While we enjoyed the meal, our Soviet friends said it was "all right," but they preferred their own foods. It was the first time that any of them had eaten in a Chinese restaurant in Moscow.

Heavy-duty shopping came next as we were departing for home tomorrow and had little time during the week to buy gifts for our families and friends. We were taken to a hard currency store, "Beriozka," where most of our shopping was done.

Once again we found ourselves running against time as we were able to purchase the last four tickets to see the performance of "Swan Lake" at the renowned Bolshoi Theater. We were indeed fortunate because Lyudmila Semenyaka, one of the most famous Russian ballerinas, was celebrating her twentieth anniversary at the Bolshoi. The performance was outstanding, and Semenyaka received one of the longest standing ovations I have ever observed.

Our last evening in Moscow ended in Hank's hotel room with Felix, our gracious host and the person most responsible for our trip. President Ausprich, Dr. Bailey, Dr. Parsons and I — in our own sincere and genuine ways — expressed our gratitude and appreciation to Dr. Rizvanov for the many courtesies that he, his colleagues and his friends extended to us. It was good to have this special time with Felix.

SUNDAY, MAY 6

Today was a day of mixed emotions. On the one hand, we were sad to leave the country and especially our Soviet friends whose camaraderie will be missed. On the other hand, we were excited about seeing our families again.

We left early for the airport and took advantage of our early departure to have one last sightseeing tour of Moscow. At 9:15 a.m., we drove past McDonald's and saw a waiting line of nearly two blocks long. Again, I was impressed by the number of buildings with the scaffolding around them and wondered where it all came from.

Margarita, Rasa, Natasha and Michael came to the airport to say one last good-bye to us. As we progressed expeditiously through customs this time, we glanced back at our young friends and saw them waving their arms and crying. After spending ten days with them last summer and several days again during this past week, it was almost like leaving family behind.

Pan Am's 747 "Ocean Clipper" was ready for us when we boarded. In fact, it left 15 minutes early since all passengers on the manifest were seated. It was strange leaving at 12:45 p.m. (Moscow time) and arriving in New York almost nine hours later at 2:30 p.m. DST.

As we crossed the George Washington Bridge, I commented, "God really did bless America." Everyone agreed.

We asked Frank Hunsinger, our driver, for just one favor on the way home. We were craving burgers and fries, so would he please stop at McDonald's in East Stroudsburg. "Gladly," he responded smiling.

We finally arrived in Bloomsburg at Buckalew Place at 7 p.m. to see the tulips in full bloom and the smiling faces of our families. It was good to be home.

Postscript

While this article was being written, Dr. Bailey is in the process of inviting Dr. Felix Rizvanov and Ms. Marina Samujlova, one of our interpreters and tour guides, to pursue graduate programs in instructional technology at Bloomsburg University. Both have indicated their interest in interactive video and would become the first Soviets to receive degrees in this program.
